

1
2
3
4
5
6
7 NATIONAL TPS ALLIANCE, et al.,
8 Plaintiffs,
9 v.
10 KRISTI NOEM, et al.,
11 Defendants.
12

Case No. 25-cv-05687-TLT

13 14 15 16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26 27
28

ORDER ON MOTION TO DISMISS; MOTION TO EXCLUDE EXPERT TESTIMONY; MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY JUDGMENT; MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Re: Dkt. Nos. 110, 142, 143, 144

Although today's times seem to be flooded with crises and emergencies—whether speculative, genuine, or contrived—our Constitution remains an important protection from unbridled power. Unilateral power has never been American. Nor has this country ignored the importance of humanitarian relief. Indeed, leaders around the world are often recognized for defending human rights, protecting the vulnerable, and pursuing efforts that foster peace. In enacting the Temporary Protected Status statute, Congress codified the importance of humanitarian relief for those within the United States who are unable to return to their country of origin. By complying with the Constitution and enforcing the purpose of the Temporary Protected Status statute, this nation's economy becomes strengthened and our society united.

Before the Court is (1) Defendants' motion to dismiss; (2) Defendants' motion to exclude the testimony of (i) Stacy Tolchin, (ii) Hannah Postel, (iii) Melanie Morten, (iv) Elliott Young, (v) Tara Watson, (vi) Tom Wong, (vii) Dana Frank; (3) Plaintiffs' motion for partial summary judgment; and (4) Defendants' motion for summary judgment.

This case was subject to several interruptions. In August, the Court's decision on Plaintiffs' motion to postpone was stayed by the Ninth Circuit, the parties' and the Court's

1 resources were strained by a lapse in appropriations by Congress from October 1, 2025 to 2 November 13, 2025, and the parties experienced a number of roadblocks in exchanging discovery.
3 Nonetheless, the Court held a hearing, as scheduled, on the motions on November 18, 2025. ECF 4 187.

5 This Order addresses each of the motions pending before the Court in five sections.

6 Section I discusses the factual and legal background, as well as the procedural history 7 under which these motions arose.

8 Section II identifies and rejects Defendants' argument that this Court lacks jurisdiction.

9 Section III discusses the Court's decision to DENY Defendants' motion to dismiss.

10 Section IV explains the Courts' decision to GRANT Defendants' motion to exclude the 11 expert testimony of (i) Stacy Tolchin, (ii) Hannah Postel, (iii) Melanie Morten, (iv) Tara Watson, 12 (v) Tom Wong, (vi) Dana Frank; and the Court's decision to DENY Defendants' motion to 13 exclude the testimony of Elliott Young.

14 Section V discusses the pending motions for summary judgment. In Section IV, the Court 15 provides the grounds for the Court's decision to GRANT Plaintiffs' motion for partial summary 16 judgment on two of the claims raised under the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"), and the 17 grounds for the Court's decision to DENY Defendants' motion for summary judgment on 18 Plaintiffs' APA claims and Equal Protection Claim.

19 I. BACKGROUND

20 A. Procedural History

21 On July 7, 2025, Plaintiffs filed the instant lawsuit asserting claims under the APA and the 22 Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment. ECF 1. The following day, Plaintiffs filed a motion 23 to postpone the effective date of the Department of Homeland Security's ("DHS") decision to 24 terminate TPS for Honduras, Nepal, and Nicaragua. ECF 17. On July 14, 2025, Defendants filed 25 an opposition to Plaintiffs' motion to postpone the effective date of DHS's decision. ECF 45.
26 Plaintiffs replied on July 18, 2025. The Court held a hearing on Plaintiffs' motion on July 29, 27 2025. ECF 71.

28 On July 31, 2025, the Court granted Plaintiffs' motion to postpone. ECF 73. On August

1 20, 2025, the Ninth Circuit granted Defendants' motion to stay this Court's order granting 2 Plaintiffs' motion to postpone pending appeal. ECF 96. The Ninth Circuit, however, declined to 3 stay the proceedings in this Court. Id.

4 On September 9, 2025, Defendants filed a motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' complaint. ECF 5 110. Plaintiffs timely opposed Defendants' motion to dismiss on September 23, 2025. ECF 121.
6 Defendants replied on September 30, 2025. ECF 128.

7 On October 2, 2025, the Court granted Plaintiffs' motion to certify the following classes:
8 the Honduras Class, the Nepal Class, and the Nicaragua Class. ECF 134.

9 On October 14, 2025, Defendants filed a motion for summary judgment and motion to 10 exclude the testimony of seven of Plaintiffs' experts. ECF 142; ECF 143. On the same day, 11 Plaintiffs filed a motion for partial summary judgment on two of Plaintiffs' APA claims and a 12 motion to consider extra-record evidence in support of their motion for partial summary judgment.
13 ECF 144; ECF 153.

14 Plaintiffs opposed Defendants' motion for summary judgment and motion to exclude 15 expert testimony on October 28, 2025. ECF 167; ECF 168. Defendants opposed Plaintiffs' 16 motion for partial summary judgment on the same day. ECF 166.

17 Defendants' filed replies in support of their pending motions on November 4, 2025. ECF 18 173; ECF 174. Plaintiffs filed a reply in support of their motion for partial summary judgment on 19 November 4, 2025. ECF 175.

20 The Court held a hearing on Defendants' motion to dismiss, Defendants' motion to 21 exclude expert testimony, Plaintiffs' motion to consider extra-record evidence, Plaintiffs' motion 22 for partial summary judgment, and Defendants' motion for summary judgment on November 18, 23 2025. ECF 187.

24 B. Factual Background

25 The Court adopts the facts as set forth in the Court's orders on Plaintiffs' motion to 26 postpone and motion for class certification. The Court explains the record as necessary, and with 27 the following facts as set forth below.

28 Since this nation's founding, federal courts have rejected the notion of unlimited and

1 unfettered power. The Court will not abandon this history. Indeed, in codifying the 2 Administrative Procedures Act (“APA”), Congress “sets forth the procedures by which federal 3 agencies are accountable to the public and their actions subject to review by the courts.” Dep’t of 4 Homeland Sec. v. Regents of the Univ. of California, 591 U.S. 1, 16 (2020) (citing Franklin v.
5 Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788, 796, (1992)). The statute requires agencies to engage in “reasoned
6 decisionmaking,” id (citing Michigan v. EPA, 576 U.S. 743, 750 (2015) (internal quotation marks 7 omitted)), and directs that agency actions be “set aside” if they are “arbitrary” or “capricious,” 5 8 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). Today, the Court complies with the requirements of the APA.

9 i. The TPS Statute

10 Congress established the Temporary Protected Status (“TPS”) program in 1990 to provide 11 humanitarian relief to foreign nationals within the United States who are unable to return to their 12 country of origin due to potential threats to their personal safety from natural disaster, civil strife 13 and armed conflict, or other extraordinary and temporary conditions. Nat'l TPS All. v. Noem, 150 14 F.4th 1000, 1010 (9th Cir. 2025); see 8 U.S.C. § 1254a. The TPS statute was enacted to reflect the 15 practice of “every Administration since and including that of President Eisenhower” which was to 16 “permit[] one or more groups of otherwise deportable aliens to remain temporarily in the United 17 States out of concern that the forced repatriation of these individuals could endanger their lives or 18 safety.” H.R. Rep. 100-627, at 6 (1988). Pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(a)(1), the Secretary of 19 Homeland Security may designate a country for TPS and grant nationals of that country protection 20 from removal and work authorization in the United States for the period their home country is so 21 designated. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(a)(1)(B).

22 In designating a country for TPS, the Secretary must engage in “consultation with 23 appropriate agencies of the Government” and publish a “statement of the findings” and an estimate 24 of the number of eligible foreign nationals. Id. § 1254a(b)(1).

25 Once a country is designated for TPS, nationals of that country can register for benefits 26 during a registration. To establish eligibility for TPS, an applicant must demonstrate, among other 27 things, that he or she is a national of the country designated for TPS, has been continuously 28 physically present and resided in the United States since the effective date of designation, and is

1 otherwise admissible as an immigrant. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(c)(2)(A); 8 C.F.R. §§ 244.2, 244.3(a), 2 1244.3(a). The government can deny an applicant TPS based on the applicant's criminal history.
3 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(c)(2)(A)–(B); 8 C.F.R. § 244.3(c). TPS applicants must also pay all fees 4 associated with applying for TPS. Id. at § 1254a(c)(1)(B).

5 Periodically, the Secretary "shall review the conditions in the foreign state . . . for which a 6 designation is in effect under this subsection and shall determine whether the conditions for such 7 designation under this subsection continue to be met." Id. at § 1254a(b)(3). If the Secretary finds 8 that the conditions are no longer met, she "shall terminate the designation by publishing notice in 9 the Federal Register of the determination." Id.

10 Under the TPS statute, termination is not effective "earlier than 60 days after the date the 11 notice is published or, if later, the expiration of the most recent previous extension." Id. The 12 Secretary may extend the designation "for an additional period of 6 months (or, in the discretion of 13 the [Secretary], a period of 12 or 18 months)" if the conditions giving rise to the TPS designation 14 persist. Id.

15 ii. History of TPS for Nepal, Honduras, and Nicaragua

16 On June 24, 2015, the Secretary designated Nepal for TPS for a period of 18 months due to 17 a breakdown of living conditions resulting from a 7.8 magnitude earthquake. 80 Fed. Reg. 36,346 18 (June 24, 2015). The earthquake impacted about one-third of the country's population and 19 damaged approximately 750,000 homes. Id. In 2016, TPS was extended for an additional 18 20 months because of sustained strained infrastructure, civil unrest, and inadequacies in safe housing, 21 food, medicine, and education. 81 Fed. Reg. 74,470 (Oct. 26, 2016). In 2018, TPS was extended 22 for several years due to legal challenges to the TPS termination for Nepal. 90 Fed. Reg. at 24,152.
23 In 2023, DHS reconsidered the 2018 decision to terminate TPS and extended TPS for recipients 24 from Nepal to June 24, 2025. 88 Fed. Reg. 40,317 (June 21, 2023). On June 6, 2025, DHS 25 published notice in the Federal Register that TPS for Nepal would terminate on August 5, 2025.
26 90 Fed. Reg. at 21,512.

27 Hurricane Mitch hit Honduras in late October 1998, causing "widespread heavy rain and 28 severe flooding" in Honduras, Nicaragua, and other nearby countries that resulted in "thousands

1 dead or missing" and "tremendous property, infrastructure, and crop damage." 25 Years Later: 2 Looking Back at the October Monster Named Mitch, NOAA (Oct. 27, 2023). In 1999, the 3 Attorney General designated Honduras for TPS for 18 months. 64 Fed. Reg. 524 (Jan. 5, 1999). 4 Over the next twenty years, TPS was repeatedly extended as DHS found continued "disruption in 5 living conditions." 79 Fed. Reg. 62170 (Oct. 16, 2014); 88 Fed. Reg. 40304 (Jun. 21, 2023). 6 DHS terminated TPS for Honduras in 2018. 83 Fed. Reg. 26,074 (June 5, 2018). Legal 7 challenges to the termination of TPS for Honduras resulted in extension of TPS for several years. 8 90 Fed. Reg. at 30,090. In 2023, DHS reconsidered the 2018 decision to terminate TPS and 9 extended TPS for Honduras through July 5, 2025. 88 Fed. Reg. at 40,304 (June 21, 2023). On 10 July 8, 2025, DHS published notice in the Federal Register that TPS for Honduras would be 11 terminated effective September 8, 2025. 90 Fed. Reg. at 30,091.

12 Nicaragua was similarly hit by Hurricane Mitch and designated for TPS in 1999. See 64 13 Fed. Reg. 526 (Jan. 5, 1999); 88 Fed. Reg. 40294 (Jun. 21, 2023). TPS was extended for nearly 14 two decades due to recurrent weather events until terminated in 2017. 82 Fed. Reg. 59,636 (Dec. 15, 2017). After the termination announcement, litigation resulted in the continued extension of 16 TPS for Nicaragua for several years. 90 Fed. Reg. at 30,087. In 2023, DHS extended TPS for 17 Nicaragua through July 8, 2025. 88 Fed. Reg. at 40,294 (June 21, 2023). On July 8, 2025, DHS 18 published notice in the Federal Register that TPS for Nicaragua would terminate on September 8, 19 2025. 90 Fed. Reg. at 30,086.

20 iii. The Current Administration and TPS

21 On the first day of his second term, President Trump issued an executive order titled, 22 "Protecting the American People Against Invasion" ("Invasion EO"). 90 Fed. Reg. 8443 (Jan. 20, 23 2025). The Invasion EO referenced to an "unprecedented flood of illegal immigration into the 24 United States" and ordered the Secretary of State, Attorney General, and DHS Secretary to 25 "rescind the policy decisions of the previous administration that led to the increased or continued 26 presence of illegal aliens in the United States, and align any and all departmental activities with 27 the policies set out by this order and the immigration laws." Id. § 16. This included "ensuring 28 that designations of Temporary Protected Status are consistent with the provisions of section 244

1 of the INA (8 U.S.C. 1254a), and that such designations are appropriately limited in scope and 2 made for only so long as may be necessary to fulfill the textual requirements of that statute.” Id. §
3 16(b). The Invasion EO would be cited in later decisions vacating or terminating TPS 4 designations. See 90 Fed. Reg. 30086 (July 8, 2025); 90 Fed. Reg. 30089 (July 8, 2025); 90 Fed.
5 Reg. 24151 (Jun. 6, 2025). See also Compl. ¶ 57 (citing “President Trump’s promise to rescind 6 policies that were magnets for illegal immigration and inconsistent with the law” when vacating 7 Haiti’s TPS extension).

8 In a January 29, 2025 post on X, Secretary Noem announced that she would end a Biden
9 order that allowed Venezuelans to stay in the country and “violate our laws.” ECF 18-16. In a 10 March 20, 2025 post on X, Secretary Noem associated “migration management” with “sav[ing] 11 American lives and get[ting] criminals off our streets!” ECF 18-17.

12 At her confirmation hearing, Secretary Noem stated that “[TPS] has been abused and 13 manipulated by the Biden Administration, and that will no longer be allowed. . . and these 14 extensions going forward the way that they are. The program was intended to be temporary[.]” 15 Compl. ¶¶ 61, 73. During a February 2, 2025 “Meet the Press” appearance, Secretary Noem stated 16 that “The TPP [sic] program has been abused and it doesn’t have integrity right now.” Compl. ¶ 17 74. The Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) has stated that, by vacating or partially 18 vacating TPS, it was “restoring integrity in our immigration system,” and fulfilling “President 19 Trump’s promise to rescind policies that were magnets for illegal immigration and inconsistent 20 with the law.” Compl. ¶ 57.

21 Other officials in this administration have vocalized their goal of terminating TPS.
22 President Trump, in response to a question from a reporter about whether he would revoke a
23 country’s TPS status, stated, “You have to remove the people; you cannot destroy our country . . .
24 In my opinion, it’s not legal. . . . Absolutely I’d revoke [TPS].” Compl. ¶ 78; ECF 145-3. During 25 the 2024 presidential campaign, then-vice-presidential candidate JD Vance stated “[w]e’re going 26 to stop doing mass grants of Temporary Protected Status.” Compl. ¶ 80. He went on to call TPS 27 designations a “magic amnesty wand” which he characterized as a “terrible indictment of [Vice 28 President Kamala Harris’s] amnesty policies.” Compl. ¶ 81. Project 2025, “the 2025 Presidential

1 Transition Project,” a product of current and former political appointees of the president explicitly
2 called for the “[r]epeal [of] TPS designations.” Compl. ¶ 84.

3 In a May 19, 2025, post on X, DHS equated TPS holders with “MS-13 gang members,” 4 “known terrorists,” and “murderers.” ECF 18-18. These statements are consistent with similar 5 statements by President Trump including one occurrence in which he stated that migrants were 6 “poisoning the blood of our country.” ECF 18-20; see also ECF 18-23 (President Trump asking 7 why people “could not come from nice countries . . . like Denmark, Switzerland, and Norway”); 8 see Compl. ¶ 98 (President Trump “How about allowing people to come to an open border . . .
9 many of them murdered far more than one person, and they’re now happily living in the United 10 States. You know now a murderer, I believe this, it’s in their genes. And we got a lot of bad genes 11 in our country right now.”); see also ECF 18-15 at 7 (Secretary Noem describing immigration as 12 an “invasion happening on purpose . . . to remake the foundation of this country”).

13 iv. The Termination Decision-Making Process

14 On April 7, 2025, DHS staff circulated copies of the TPS decision memos (“DM”) for 15 Honduras and Nicaragua. ECF 176-22; ECF 145-31. The DMs terminating TPS for Honduras 16 and Nicaragua were drafted before receiving updated country conditions reports from the 17 Department of State. See ECF 176-22 at 3 (“[T]he DM is now ready to go . . . We did not receive 18 a recommendation from DOS. You are correct that DOS will not provide country conditions 19 anymore.”); see also ECF 145-21 (“I wanted to check in on about COI for Nicaragua and 20 Honduras. We are currently prepping both DMs to circulate this week, but I am not sure we have 21 the COI from RRU. . . Do you have an ETA?”); compare ECF 145-31 (decision memos written by 22 April 7) with ECF 145-21 (DHS personnel acknowledging lack of country conditions information 23 on April 8).

24 In the case of Nepal, Defendants recognized they lacked “an updated DOS report,” ECF 25 145-35, and downplayed the importance of the report because it supported their desired result:
26 “the recommendation was to terminate so we should move forward.” ECF 176-20; see ECF 63; 27 ECF 64 (CAR indices for Nepal and Nicaragua, lacking any contemporaneous State Department 28 country conditions analysis or recommendation letter).

1 Moreover, in requesting country conditions reports for Honduras, Nicaragua, and Nepal, 2 the DHS personnel requested revised reports that “only include[d] around 1 page of country 3 conditions” and “[i]nclude[d] any improvements” without “mention environmental concerns or 4 climate change.” ECF 176-2. Researchers had their team “revise the reports for Nepal, Honduras, 5 Nicaragua, and Haiti to make them consistent with [these] new guidelines.” Id. DHS personnel 6 also added a “national interest analysis” based on “data/analysis.” ECF 176-33 at 6 (“OP&S is 7 working on improving the TPS decision memos and we are adding a national interest analysis 8 We are wanting to provide data/analysis in our TPS decision memo.”); id. (“We’d like to request 9 another analysis . . . [t]his time it’s for Cameroon and Nepal.”). However, as described by policy 10 analysts, this “data” involved “[s]uch a LOW number of fraud” for Nepal that “[i]t’s so 11 laughable that it’s even in the paper.” ECF 176-33 at 2; see id. (showing 1 “Found Fraud” out of 12 12,859 total for Nepal). DHS personnel sought the “same type of data” analysts provided for 13 Nepal, “but this time for Honduras and Nicaragua.” ECF 176-34 at 5. After receiving this data, 14 DHS personnel contemplated how to explain their TPS terminations: “The problem is if we sing 15 the praises of Honduras (which we certainly do), then it calls into question why we’re also 16 terminating the program in Nicaragua, with its murderous, dictatorial regime. Which in turn might 17 open us up to questions about why we’re terminating for both countries when the conditions on 18 the ground are so much better in Honduras.” ECF 176-11.

19 DHS personnel were also instructed to narrow the scope of her review to the conditions 20 that gave rise to the initial TPS designation. “[E]ndemic” issues like corruption were considered 21 “outside the scope” of review. ECF 176-2. “Women’s rights” and “environmental concerns” were 22 similarly beyond the scope. Id. Instead, the focus was to be on the “improvements,” and 23 descriptions of the conditions related to the original designation. Id. This resulted in terminations 24 that, inter alia, concluded that a “murderous dictatorial regime,” ECF 176-11 at 1329_0012, was 25 now safe, without even addressing the country’s political situation. See 90 Fed. Reg. 30086 26 (Nicaragua Termination Notice). The termination notices fail to address food insecurity in Nepal, 27 staggering crime in Honduras, or humanitarian crises in Nicaragua when describing the basis for 28 terminating TPS. See Compl. ¶¶ 63, 66–69.

v. The Classes

The Court certified the following classes:

Honduras TPS Class: All persons who have been granted TPS pursuant to the TPS designation of Honduras and who have not been granted lawful permanent residence.

Nepal TPS Class: All persons who have been granted TPS pursuant to the TPS designation of Nepal and who have not been granted lawful permanent residence

Nicaragua TPS Class: All persons who have been granted TPS pursuant to the TPS designation of Nicaragua and who have not been granted lawful permanent residence

ECF 134 at 6. The following plaintiffs have been appointed as the Class Representatives:

Plaintiff Denis Molina is 49 years old, a native of Honduras, and has been in the United States since 1997. ECF 17-2 ¶¶ 4–5. He applied for and has maintained TPS since Hurricane Mitch hit Honduras. Id. ¶ 5. He has been a church pastor for over 22 years and works various jobs in construction and as a mechanic to support his family, which includes a wife and four children. Id. ¶¶ 6–12. Two of his children, one aged 4 and another 22, have been diagnosed with autism and require special programs to support their development. Id. ¶¶ 9, 13. He is the sole breadwinner for his family. Id. ¶ 12. If TPS terminates, Molina fears that he will not be able to support his family in Honduras and, if his entire family relocates to Honduras, his children will lose the support of special programs for their development. Id. ¶¶ 12, 14.

Plaintiff Johny Silva is 29 years old, a native of Honduras, and came to the United States when he was three-years old. ECF 17-3 ¶ 2. He was granted TPS after Hurricane Mitch. Id. ¶ 4. Silva is a Certified Nursing Assistant at Stanford Hospital and relies on his TPS for work authorization. Id. ¶¶ 10, 13. Without TPS, Silva and his son, approximately 9 years old and diagnosed with autism, will lose their health insurance. Id. ¶ 13. Silva will also lose his job, not be able to contribute to his family's rent, will have to abandon his dreams of becoming a nurse, and be separated from the rest of his family. Id. ¶¶ 13–14, 16.

Plaintiff Elena Hernandez is 67 years old, a native of Nicaragua, came to the United States in 1996 because her family was targeted by the Nicaraguan government, and was granted

1 TPS in 1999. ECF 17-4 ¶ 3. Plaintiff Hernandez has worked at an aquatic plant nursery, cleaning
2 company, and as a shop steward with TPS. Id. ¶ 7. Plaintiff Hernandez has asthma and a heart
3 condition that requires daily medication. Id. ¶ 9. Without TPS, Plaintiff Hernandez would lose 4 her health insurance and social security income even though she has paid into social security for 5 more than 25 years. Id. ¶¶ 9, 11. She would lose her job, be separated from her family, have no 6 way of supporting herself, and worries that her health will rapidly decline without continued 7 access to healthcare. Id. ¶¶ 10, 12, 14. Given her family history and views, she may also face
8 persecution in Nicaragua. Id. ¶ 14

9 Plaintiff Sandhya Lama is 43 years old, a native of Nepal, and has been in the United 10 States since 2008. ECF 17-6 ¶ 2. She came to the United States in 2008 to study at a university in 11 Virginia, received her master's degree in 2014, and has been a TPS holder since 2015. Id. ¶¶ 2, 6.
12 She is a single mother of three U.S. citizen children, a sole provider, and is currently a CXO Multi 13 Site Lead LC for Amazon. Id. ¶¶ 2, 10–13. If forced to return to Nepal, Lama's children would 14 lose opportunities, and one of Lama's children would not be able to get medical treatment for her 15 severe allergies. Id. ¶ 15. Returning to Nepal would also be dangerous because Lama's family 16 has suffered persecution from the Maoist (communist) party in Nepal, including having their 17 ancestral house bombed and brother being taken as hostage. Id. ¶¶ 4, 16.

18 Plaintiff Teofilo Martinez is 57 years, a native of Honduras, and has been on TPS since 19 1997. ECF 17-8 ¶ 2. He is a licensed soccer instructor, a licensed realtor, and owns a landscaping 20 business. Id. ¶ 9. He has also been volunteering with the Honduran Consulate for the last 7 years, 21 is on the executive committee for NTPSA, and co-hosts a radio show for TPS holders. Id.
22 Without TPS, Martinez would be separated from his partner of over 25 years, lose his job, and not 23 be able to travel for his volunteer work with NTPSA. Id. ¶¶ 15, 18.

24 II. JURISDICTION

25 Defendants raise four distinct challenges to the Court's exercise of jurisdiction over 26 Plaintiffs' claims. ECF 110 at 2–3, 12. Defendants argue that (A) the TPS statute broadly 27 prohibits judicial review of "any determination of the Secretary with respect to" TPS designations, 28 terminations, or extensions, id. at 2; (B) 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1) bars this Court from "enjoin[ing]" or

1 restrain[ing]” the Secretary from implementing her decisions, id; (C) 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) 2 bars review of any “decision or action of … the Secretary of Homeland Security the authority for 3 which is specified under [the INA] to be in the discretion of … the Secretary …” such as the 4 Secretary’s termination decisions, id at 12; and (D) the APA does not allow for review of agency 5 action, like the Secretary’s decisions, that are committed to agency discretion by law. Id at 3. The 6 arguments in Defendants’ motion to dismiss mirror those raised in their motion for summary 7 judgment. ECF 142 at 7–12. Defendants also previously raised most of these arguments in 8 opposition to Plaintiffs’ motion to postpone, and in opposition to Plaintiffs’ motion for class 9 certification. ECF 45 at 2; ECF 99 at 3. The Court addresses each of Defendants’ jurisdictional 10 arguments as they relate to Defendants’ motion to dismiss and motion for summary judgment 11 below.

12 A. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(5)(A) Does Not Bar Review of Plaintiffs’ Claims

13 In Defendants’ motion to dismiss and motion for summary judgment, Defendants argues 14 that 8 U.S.C. §1254a(b)(5)(A) strips federal courts of jurisdiction to review the Secretary’s 15 terminations. ECF 110 at 10; ECF 142 at 1. Specifically, Defendants argue that “[t]here is no 16 judicial review of any determination of the [Secretary] with respect to the designation, or 17 termination or extension of a designation, of a foreign state” for TPS relief. ECF 110 at 9.
18 Defendants further argue that the word “any” carries an expansive meaning and encompasses the 19 Secretary’s TPS decisions here. Id. at 9. Plaintiffs aver that Plaintiffs’ challenges fall outside of 20 the jurisdictional bar articulated in §1254a(b)(5)(A) because Plaintiffs challenge the process by 21 which Defendants made the TPS decisions, rather than the substance of the Secretary’s 22 conclusions. ECF 121 at 3.

23 8 U.S.C. §1254a(b)(5)(A) reads “[t]here is no judicial review of any determination of the 24 [Secretary] with respect to the designation, or termination of a designation, of a foreign state under 25 this subsection.” Several federal courts, including this Court, have found jurisdiction exists over 26 claims where plaintiffs allege that the Secretary exceeded the scope of his or her authority in 27 deciding to terminate, or by the manner in which he or she decided to terminate, TPS 28

1 designations.¹

2 A full review of § 1254a supports a finding that the phrase “any determination” should be 3 interpreted to mean the single act of deciding whether the country conditions continue to be met
 4 for the purposes of designating or terminating TPS. See 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) (“At least 60
 5 days before end of the initial period of designation . . . the Attorney General . . . shall determine 6 whether the conditions for such designation under this subsection continue to be met”); (“If the 7 Attorney General determines under subparagraph (A) that a foreign state . . . no longer continues 8 to meet the conditions for designation under paragraph (1), the Attorney General shall terminate 9 the designation.”). As the Supreme Court in McNary v. Haitian Refugee Cent., Inc explained, the 10 words “a determination” describe “a single act rather than a group of decisions or a practice or 11 procedure employed in making decisions” and do not include “general collateral challenges to 12 unconstitutional practices and policies used by the agency” in determining whether to terminate 13 TPS. 498 U.S. 479, 492 (1991).

14 Plaintiffs do not challenge the singular decisions that the Secretary reached for the TPS 15 terminations at issue; Plaintiffs challenge the Secretary’s decision-making and implementation 16 process as an exercise of extra-legal power prohibited by the APA and federal constitution.
 17 Compl. ¶¶ 3–5. The caselaw above demonstrates that while federal district courts may be barred 18 from reviewing a Secretary’s discretionary decision to designate a country’s TPS status, Nat’l TPS 19

20 ¹ See ECF 73 at 20 (“[T]he Court finds that 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(5) does not preclude the Court’s 21 jurisdiction over Plaintiffs’ claims”); Nat’l TPS All, 150 F.4th at 1017 (9th Cir. Aug. 29, 2025) 22 (finding that nothing in the statute precludes review of a Secretary’s “conclusion as to the extent of 23 her power under the TPS statute”); CASA, Inc. v. Noem, No. 25-cv-1484, 2025 WL 1907378, at *6 24 (D. Md. July 10, 2025) (finding plaintiffs’ claim challenging the alleged policy or practice of 25 making preordained determinations to terminate TPS designations in order to reduce the number 26 of non-white immigrants in the United States not barred by § 1254a(b)(5)(A)); Centro Presente v.
 27 Department of Homeland Security, 332 F.Supp.3d 393 (D. Mass. 2018) (concluding that the 28 plaintiffs’ APA claim was not barred where it challenged, in relation to three separate countries’ TPS determinations, an allegedly “new policy that TPS designation determination are to be made solely on the basis of whether the conditions that created the initial designation persist rather than a broader view of whether the country is safely able to accept returning nationals”); Ramos v.
Nielsen, 321 F. Supp. 3d at 1092, 1099–1100, 1104 (N.D. Cal. 2018) (finding that a claim contesting the termination of the TPS designations for four countries was not barred by § 1254a(b)(5)(A) where the challenge was to the alleged adoption of a “new interpretation of the TPS statute” which based determinations on racial animus and “alleged disdain for non-white immigrants”).

1 All, 150 F.4th at 1017, courts may review the process by which the Secretary reached that decision 2 where plaintiffs allege that the Secretary’s decision-making process constitutes an unlawful 3 departure from the statute, past agency practice, or the constitution. Id. Plaintiffs’ claims fall into 4 the latter category of allegations for which this Court may exercise jurisdiction to review. Id.

5 Defendants’ reach for unfettered authority in the immigration realm raise notable 6 comparisons to arguments that were once made, but are now rejected today. Indeed, Congress and 7 the Executive Branch must abide by the Constitution.

8 At the end of the nineteenth century, public sentiment toward many newcomers, 9 particularly migrant laborers from China, grew bitter. Congress responded by enacting the 10 Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882, ch. 126, 22 Stat. 58, which prohibited the entry of Chinese 11 laborers to the United States. The Scott Act, ch. 1064, 25 Stat. 504, enacted in 1888, forbade 12 reentry of Chinese laborers who had left after previously residing in this country. In some of its 13 earliest cases, the Supreme Court recognized Congress’s plenary power over immigration matters 14 and affirmed Congress’s ability to vest the exclusive authority to enforce its stated policy goals in 15 the Executive Branch. Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889) (holding that power to exclude 16 foreign nationals is “incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the United States,” 17 and Congress’s determinations regarding whom to exclude are “conclusive upon the judiciary”); 18 Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U.S. 651, 659–60, (1892) (noting that Congress may 19 delegate authority to exclude foreign nationals to executive officers, in which case courts cannot 20 second-guess decisions by those officers acting within delegated authority); Lem Moon Sing v.
21 United States, 158 U.S. 538, 547 (1895) (“The power of congress to exclude aliens altogether 22 from the United States, or to prescribe the terms and conditions upon which they may come to this 23 country, and to have its declared policy in that regard enforced exclusively through executive 24 officers, without judicial intervention, is settled.”).

25 However, around the turn of the century, “the Court began to walk back the plenary power 26 doctrine in significant ways.” California v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 476 F. Supp. 3d 994, 27 1019 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (citing Castro v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 835 F.3d 422, 441 (3d Cir.
28 2016)). In Kaoru Yamataya v. Fisher, 189 U.S. 86 (1903), the Supreme Court limited Congress’s

1 power over immigration, noting that the power was qualified by basic constitutional 2 considerations. California v. U.S. Dep't of Homeland Sec., 476 F. Supp. 3d at 1019 (citing Castro, 3 835 F.3d at 442 (quoting Henry M. Hart, Jr., The Power of Congress to Limit the Jurisdiction of 4 Federal Courts: An Exercise in Dialectic, 66 Harv. L. Rev. 1362, 1390 n.85 (1953)). As the Court 5 explained in Landon v. Plasencia, “once an alien gains admission to our country and begins to 6 develop the ties that go with permanent residence his constitutional status changes accordingly.
7 Our cases have frequently suggested that a continuously present resident alien is entitled to a fair 8 hearing when threatened with deportation.” 459 U.S. 21, 32 (1982). The APA establishes a 9 “basic presumption of judicial review [for] one ‘suffering legal wrong because of agency action.’” 10 Dep't of Homeland Sec. v. Regents of the Univ. of California, 591 U.S. 1, 16 (2020). Notably, the 11 purpose of the jurisdictional providing sections of the APA was to permit a form of review for 12 agency action related to immigration. See Shaughnessy v. Pedreiro, 349 U.S. 48, 51 (1955) 13 (noting “purpose” of the provisions of the APA which allow judicial review were “to remove 14 obstacles to judicial review of agency action under subsequently enacted statutes like the 1952 15 Immigration Act”).

16 Similar to shifting attitudes towards Chinese laborers, American sentiment towards the 17 treatment of Japanese nationals and Japanese American citizens during the Second World War has 18 evolved. Although, in Korematsu v. United States, the Supreme Court once held that the 19 “exclusion of those of Japanese origin [from the West Coast war area] was deemed necessary 20 because of the presence of an unascertained number of disloyal members of the group, most of 21 whom we have no doubt were loyal to this country,” 323 U.S. 214, 218–19, (1944), the Supreme 22 Court has since recognized that “Korematsu was gravely wrong the day it was decided, has been 23 overruled in the court of history, and – to be clear – ‘has no place in law under the Constitution,’” 24 Trump v. Hawaii, 585 U.S. 667, 710 (2018). While the Supreme Court in Korematsu affirmed an 25 abhorrent wartime decision, it did not decline to hear the case on jurisdictional grounds. Id. at 26 224.

27 Plaintiffs do not ask this Court to second-guess Congress’s policy decisions, nor do 28 Plaintiffs ask this Court to review the substance of the Secretary’s discretionary exercise of 1 authority. Rather, Plaintiffs claim that the Secretary exceeded the authority that Congress 2 delegated to her, and §1254a(b)(5)(A) does not bar review of Plaintiffs' claims. Accordingly, the 3 Court, finds that §1254a(b)(5)(A) does not strip the Court of jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' claims.

4 B. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1) Does Not Prohibit the Court from Granting Plaintiffs' 5 Requested Relief

6 Defendants argue that the form of relief sought by the Plaintiffs is barred by 8 U.S.C. § 7 1252(f)(1). ECF 110 at 3. Plaintiffs contend that the declaratory relief and order to set aside the 8 challenged terminations sought by Plaintiffs is proper under Section 706 of the APA and that 9 controlling Ninth Circuit precedent supports their position that § 1252(f)(1) does not bar such 10 relief. ECF 121 at 8.

11 8 U.S.C. §1252(f)(1) provides in relevant part as follows:

12 In general. Regardless of the nature of the action or claim or of the 13 identity of the party or parties bringing the action, no court (other than 14 the Supreme Court) shall have jurisdiction or authority to enjoin or 15 restrain the operation of the provisions of part IV of this subchapter, 16 as amended by the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant 17 Responsibility Act of 1996, other than with respect to the application 18 of such provisions to an individual alien against whom proceedings 19 under such chapter have been initiated.

20 The Ninth Circuit has held that “section 1252(f)(1) does not prohibit relief in the form of a 21 stay or postponement of agency action under the APA” and that a district court order that does 22 “enjoin or restrain” the Secretary’s policy “is not barred by 1252(f)(1) if it affects only agency 23 actions that exceed the agency’s statutory authority.” Nat'l TPS All., 150 F.4th at 1018. Instead, 24 1252(f)(1) only “limits the district court’s authority to enjoin [an agency] from carrying out 25 legitimate [] orders.” Id.

26 Here, Plaintiffs allege that the Secretary acted outside of her statutory authority by 27 executing a preordained decision to terminate TPS designations, failing to abide by previous 28 practices with respect to notice of termination and the orderly transition period, and relying on racial- and national-origin-based animus. Compl. ¶¶ 3–5. In Plaintiffs’ motion for summary judgment, Plaintiffs further allege that the Secretary’s decision violates the APA because in terminating TPS for Honduras, Nicaragua, and Nepal, the Secretary ignored intervening crisis as required by 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A). ECF 144 at 21. Injunctive or declaratory relief for

1 Plaintiffs' claims do not fall within the purview of those actions barred from court intervention 2 under §1252(f)(1) because Plaintiffs seek a court order enjoining "action that exceed[s] the 3 agency's statutory authority." Nat'l TPS All., 150 F.4th at 1018; see also Immigr. Defs. L. Ctr. V.
4 Noem, 145 4th 972, 990 (9th Cir. 2025) (holding that 1252(f)(1) does not bar injunctive relief for 5 claims under the APA). Moreover, Defendants acknowledge binding precedent which rejects 6 Defendants argument that 1252(f)(1) bars declaratory relief. ECF 110 at 15 (acknowledging 7 Rodriguez v. Hayes, 591 F.3d 1105, 1119 (9th Cir. 2010)).

8 Accordingly, the Court finds that 8 U.S.C. §1252(f)(1) does not bar the Court from 9 revieing Plaintiffs' claims.

10 C. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) Does Not Bar Review of Plaintiffs' APA Claim

11 Defendants further argue that 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) bars judicial review of the 12 Secretary's decision regarding any "orderly departure" period. ECF 110 at 12. Defendants argue 13 that 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) "[t]here are no conditions that the Secretary must satisfy before" 14 she can exercise her authority and that "Congress has in no way prescribed how that discretion 15 must be exercised." ECF 110 at 12 (quoting Bouarfa v. Mayorkas, 604 U.S. 6, 13–15 (2024)).
16 Plaintiffs respond that the Secretary's decision to shorten the orderly transition period was neither 17 discretionary nor a form of relief, and that, as a result, the Secretary's action is not covered by § 18 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii)'s judicial bar. ECF 121 at 8.

19 Section 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) bars judicial review of any "decision or action of ... the 20 Secretary of Homeland Security the authority for which is specified under [the INA] to be in the 21 discretion of ... the Secretary ..." Section 1252(a)(2)(B) covers "orders denying discretionary 22 relief in individual cases," not "the type of challenges to the Secretary's regulations, orders, 23 policies, and directives" where plaintiffs "claim that the challenged policies violate the Equal 24 Protection guarantee of the federal constitution and the Administrative Procedure Act." Nakka, 25 111 F.4th at 999, 1015 (quoting Make the Road N.Y. v. Wolf, 962 F.3d 612, 628–31 (D.C. Cir.
26 2020) ("MTRNY")). Moreover, an agency must "display awareness" of, and "offer good reasons" 27 for, a departure from a "decades-old practice." FDA v. Wages & White Lions Invs., L.L.C., 604 28 U.S. 542, 570 (2025).

1 The length of the “orderly transition” period, which DHS makes available to all TPS
2 holders when a termination occurs, is not a form of discretionary relief from removal. 8 U.S.C. § 3 1254a(b)(3)(B). At a minimum, the TPS statute provides a specific timeframe by which the 4 Secretary must abide; that is, a termination of TPS “shall not be effective earlier than 60 days after 5 the notice is published or, if later, the expiration of the most recent previous extension.” However, 6 Plaintiffs demonstrate that the provision of at least a six-month “orderly transition” period is a 7 longstanding past practice of the DHS. ECF 28. Unexplained departure from such a longstanding 8 practice reflects an abuse of the agency’s discretion where the practice has created “serious 9 reliance interests.” Wages & White Lions Invs., L.L.C., 604 U.S. at 567–68. Under either the 10 statutorily proscribed timeframe, or the timeframe Plaintiffs allege the agency adopted by past 11 practice, the orderly transition period is not a decision left to the discretion of the Secretary. See
12 Nat'l TPS All. v. Noem, No. 25-cv-05687, 2025 WL 2684340, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 8, 2025)
13 (finding “Defendants fail to show how 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii)’s mandate concerning discretionary relief 14 applies to” Plaintiffs’ claim that the Secretary’s terminations and associated orderly transition 15 periods violated the APA).

16 Accordingly, Plaintiffs’ challenge to the agency’s change in position regarding orderly 17 transition periods is not a form of discretionary relief covered by Section 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii)’s 18 jurisdictional bar. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) does not preclude this Court’s jurisdiction over 19 Plaintiffs’ claims.

20 D. 5 U.S.C. § 701(a)(2) Does Not Prohibit the Court from Reviewing Plaintiffs’ 21 Claims

22 Defendants further argue that jurisdiction is barred by § 701(a)(2) of the APA, because the 23 TPS statute commits the Secretary’s determinations regarding TPS designations under 24 § 1254a(b)(1) to the Secretary’s informed, discretionary judgment. ECF 110 at 11.

25 The full text of 5 U.S.C. § 701(a), which bars juridical review in some limited 26 circumstances, reads:

27 This chapter applies, according to the provisions thereof, except to the 28 extent that –

- (1) statutes preclude judicial review; or
- (2) agency action is committed to agency discretion by law

1 The Supreme Court has stated that the APA provides that “[a] person suffering legal wrong 2 because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action within the meaning
3 of a relevant statute, is entitled to judicial review thereof.” Abbott Laboratories v. Gardner, 387
4 U.S. 136, 140 (1967). The Supreme Court has further held that, under § 701(a)(2), agency action 5 is not subject to judicial review “to the extent that” such action “is committed to agency discretion 6 by law.” Block v. Community Nutrition Institute, 467 U.S. 340, 349 (1984). However, that 7 provision applies only in “rare instances” where a “statute is drawn so that a court would have no 8 meaningful standard against which to judge the agency’s exercise of discretion.” Spencer Enters., Inc. v. United States, 345 F.3d 683, 688 (9th Cir. 2003) (quoting Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821, 830 (1985)).

11 Because courts in this district have recognized distinct applications of § 701(a)(2) to 12 constitutional and statutory claims, the Court addresses Defendants’ fourth jurisdictional argument 13 as applied to (i) Plaintiffs’ due process claim and (ii) Plaintiffs’ APA claims.

14 i. § 701(a)(2) Does Not Apply to Plaintiffs’ Equal Protection Claim

15 As a preliminary matter, courts in this district have held that § 701(a)(2)’s jurisdictional 16 bar does not apply to claims that an agency acted outside its constitutional authority in executing a 17 decision. See San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. v. AmeriCorps, 784 F. Supp. 3d 1280, 1290 (N.D.
18 Cal. 2025) (stating that, “absent clear congressional intent to preclude review of a constitutional 19 claim, § 701(a)(2) does not bar review of colorable constitutional claims arising from agency 20 actions ‘committed to agency discretion by law’”); see also Webster, 486 U.S. at 601, 603 (stating 21 that “the language and structure of § 102(c) [of the National Security Act] indicate that Congress 22 meant to commit individual employee discharges to the Director’s discretion, and that § 701(a)(2) 23 accordingly precludes judicial review of these decisions under the APA” and stating “[w]e do not 24 think § 102(c) may be read to exclude review of constitutional claims”).

25 Here, § 701(a)(2) is inapplicable with respect to Plaintiffs’ Equal Protection claims, 26 because that claim arises under the Fifth Amendment to the federal constitution. Accordingly, 27 § 701(a)(2) does not bar Plaintiffs’ constitutional claim.

28 ii. § 701(a)(2) Does Not Bar Review of Plaintiffs’ APA Claims

1 Defendants claim that the TPS statute commits the Secretary’s determinations regarding 2 TPS designations to the Secretary’s informed, discretionary judgment, and that § 701(a)(2) of the 3 APA precludes judicial review of agency action “committed to agency discretion by law.” ECF 4 110 at 11. Plaintiffs argue that the TPS statute provides statutory requirements such that the 5 decision-making process Plaintiffs’ challenge is not discretionary. ECF 121 at 7.

6 The Ninth Circuit has held that § 701(a)(2) does not deprive court of jurisdiction when an 7 agency policy provides “law to apply.” Alcaraz v. INS, 384 F.3d 1150, 1161 (9th Cir. 2004); see 8 Mendez-Gutierrez v. Ashcroft, 340 F.3d 865, 868 (9th Cir. 2003) (same). That is, § 701(a)(2) does 9 not bar review if “regulations or agency practice provide a ‘meaningful standard’ by which this 10 court may review its exercise of discretion.” Spencer Enters., Inc., 345 F.3d at 688.

11 Here, 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) provides that, on periodic review, the Secretary, “after 12 consultation with appropriate agencies of the Government, shall review the conditions in the 13 foreign state . . . for which a designation is in effect under this subsection and shall determine 14 whether the conditions for such designation continue to be met.” If she determines conditions are 15 not met, she “shall terminate” the designation. Id. § 1254a(b)(3)(B). If she “does not determine 16 ... that a foreign state . . . no longer meets the conditions for designation ... the period of 17 designation . . . is extended.” Id. § 1254a(b)(3)(C). At least two events must occur for the 18 Secretary’s decision regarding a TPS designation to be compliant with the statute. First, the 19 Secretary must make the decision “after consultation with appropriate agencies.” Id. § 20 1254a(b)(3)(A). Second, the Secretary must “review the conditions in the foreign state.” Id.
21 Absent each of these processes, a Secretary’s decisions regarding TPS designations are contrary to 22 law. Id.

23 Thus, regarding Plaintiffs’ APA claims, the Court finds that there is “law to apply” under 24 the TPS statute, such that the process by which the Secretary decides to terminate a TPS 25 designation is not an unreviewable exercise of authority. Alcaraz v. INS, 384 F.3d 1150, 1161 (9th 26 Cir. 2004) (holding that 701(a)(2) did not deprive court of jurisdiction because agency policy 27 provided “law to apply”). § 1254a(b)(3)(A) provides a “meaningful standard” against which the 28 Court may measure the Secretary’s conduct in considering Plaintiffs’ APA claims challenging the

1 Secretary's failure to conduct the country conditions review and consult with the appropriate 2 government agencies before reaching her termination decision. See Compl. ¶ 156(a) (alleging that 3 Secretary's termination decisions "were not based on a review of country conditions, as required 4 by 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)); see Spencer Enters., Inc., 345 F.3d at 688.

5 Therefore, § 701(a)(2) is not a bar to judicial review of the claims asserted here.

6 * * *

7 Under these statutory provisions, ordinarily, federal district courts are barred from 8 reviewing a Secretary's discretionary decision to designate a country's TPS status, particularly 9 when doing so would enjoin or restrain the agency from performing its law enforcement function.
10 However, here, Plaintiffs claims that the Secretary acted outside of her statutory authority by 11 executing a preordained decision to terminate TPS designations without conducting an objective 12 review of the country condition, failing to abide by previous practices with respect to notice of 13 termination and the orderly transition period, and relying on racial- and national-origin-based 14 animus. Compl. ¶¶ 3–5. Plaintiffs, therefore, raise challenges under the APA and federal 15 constitution that are not subject to the jurisdictional bars discussed in the statutes above.
16 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants' motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(1) and rejects 17 Defendants' argument that the Court lacks jurisdiction in Defendants' motion for summary 18 judgment.

19 III. MOTION TO DISMISS UNDER RULE 12(B)(6)

20 A. Legal Standard

21 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2) requires a complaint to include "a short and plain 22 statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2). To 23 overcome a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss after the Supreme Court's decisions in Ashcroft v.
24 Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 (2009), and Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544 (2007), a plaintiff's 25 "factual allegations [in the complaint] 'must . . . suggest that the claim has at least a plausible 26 chance of success.'" Levitt v. Yelp! Inc., 765 F.3d 1123, 1135 (9th Cir. 2014). The Court 27 "accept[s] factual allegations in the complaint as true and construe[s] the pleadings in the light 28 most favorable to the nonmoving party." Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 519 F.3d

1 1025, 1031 (9th Cir. 2008). “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual 2 content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the 3 misconduct alleged.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. When assessing the sufficiency of a complaint 4 under Rule 12(b)(6), if the Court considers materials outside of the pleadings, then the motion is 5 converted into a motion for summary judgment. Khoja v. Orexigen Therapeutics, Inc., 899 F.3d
6 988, 1002 (9th Cir. 2018).

7 B. Plaintiffs’ Complaint Sufficiently Alleges Facts to Surmount Defendants’ 8 Challenge Under Rule 12(b)(6)

9 Beyond their jurisdictional arguments, Defendants argue that Plaintiffs fail to state claims 10 under the pleading standard required to survive a motion to dismiss. ECF 110 at 15. Plaintiffs 11 argue that the complaint sufficiently alleges that the Secretary acted outside of her statutory 12 authority by (i) executing a preordained decision to terminate TPS designations, (ii) ignoring 13 intervening country conditions, (iii) failing to abide by previous practices with respect to notice of 14 termination and the orderly transition period, and (iv) relying on racial-based and national-origin-15 based animus to survive Defendants’ motion. ECF 121 at 9.

16 i. Plaintiffs’ Plausibly Allege that the Secretary’s Termination Decision-making Process was Arbitrary and Capricious Under the APA.

17 Plaintiffs’ first claim under the APA is that the Secretary failed to conduct an objective 18 review of country conditions, as statutorily required, but instead executed a preordained decision 19 to terminate TPS and searched for a rationale to support the decision. Compl. ¶ 3. Defendants 20 argue that even a cursory inspection of the federal register notices announcing the terminations at 21 issue here reveal that the Secretary engaged in proper decision making under the TPS statute.
22 ECF 110 at 16; (citing Nepal Termination, 90 Fed. Reg. at 24,151; Honduras Termination, 90 Fed.
23 Reg. at 30,089; Nicaragua Termination, 90 Fed. Reg. 30,087 (July 8, 2025)). Plaintiffs further 24 argue that Plaintiffs present facts sufficient to render Plaintiffs’ claim “plausible on its face.” ECF 25 121 at 10.

26 The APA provides that “[a] person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or 27 adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action within the meaning of a relevant statute, is 28 entitled to judicial review thereof.” 5 U.S.C. § 702. The APA also requires Courts to “hold

1 unlawful and set aside agency action, findings, and conclusions found to be . . . arbitrary, 2 capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(a).
3 Moreover, “[c]ourts must exercise their independent judgment in deciding whether an agency has 4 acted within its statutory authority, as the APA requires.” Loper Bright Enters. v. Raimondo, 603
5 U.S. 369, 412 (2024). 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) requires the Secretary to make a determination 6 of a country’s TPS designation “after consultation with appropriate agencies” and upon “review of 7 the conditions in the foreign state.” (emphasis added). Moreover, the Supreme Court has held that 8 agencies must offer the true reason for a decision. Dep’t of Com. v. New York, 588 U.S. 752, 785 9 (2019) (“The reasoned explanation requirement of administrative law . . . is meant to ensure that 10 agencies offer genuine justifications for important decisions, reasons that can be scrutinized by 11 courts and the interested public. Accepting contrived reasons would defeat the purpose of the 12 enterprise.”). “[P]retexual” justifications cannot support an agency’s decision. Id. at 780. TPS 13 decisions that are “preordained” or based on “political influence,” rather than country conditions, 14 violate the APA. See Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d at 345–46 (quoting 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)).

15 Here, the complaint sufficiently alleges that officials in this administration, including the 16 President himself, arguably had more than a policy preference which guided their review of the 17 TPS program. On January 20, 2025, the day he took office, President Trump issued an Executive 18 Order titled “Protecting the American People Against Invasion.” Compl. ¶ 46. The “invasion” 19 referenced in the order was the purported “unprecedented flood of illegal immigration into the 20 United States.” Id. The Invasion E.O. directed the DHS Secretary to “promptly take all 21 appropriate action, consistent with law, to rescind the policy decisions of the previous 22 administration that led to the increased or continued presence of illegal aliens in the United 23 States,” including by reviewing “designations of Temporary Protected Status.” Id. At her 24 confirmation hearing, Secretary Noem stated that “[TPS] has been abused and manipulated by the 25 Biden Administration, and that will no longer be allowed. . . and these extensions going forward 26 the way that they are. The program was intended to be temporary[.]” Compl. ¶¶ 61, 73. During 27 a February 2, 2025 “Meet the Press” appearance, Secretary Noem stated that “The TPP [sic] 28 program has been abused and it doesn’t have integrity right now.” Compl. ¶ 74. The Department

1 of Homeland Security (“DHS”) has stated that, by vacating or partially vacating TPS, it was 2 “restoring integrity in our immigration system,” and fulfilling “President Trump’s promise to 3 rescind policies that were magnets for illegal immigration and inconsistent with the law.” Compl.
4 ¶ 57. Other officials in this administration have vocalized their goal of terminating TPS.
5 President Trump, in response to a question from a reporter about whether he would revoke a
6 country’s TPS status, stated, “You have to remove the people; you cannot destroy our country . . .
7 In my opinion, it’s not legal. . . . Absolutely I’d revoke [TPS].” Compl. ¶ 78. During the 2024 8 presidential campaign, then-vice-presidential candidate JD Vance stated “[w]e’re going to stop 9 doing mass grants of Temporary Protected Status.” Compl. ¶ 80. He went on to call TPS
10 designations a “magic amnesty wand” which he characterized as a “terrible indictment of [Vice 11 President Kamala Harris’s] amnesty policies.” Compl. ¶ 81. Project 2025, “the 2025 Presidential 12 Transition Project,” a product of current and former political appointees of the president explicitly 13 called for the “[r]epeal [of] TPS designations.” Compl. ¶ 84.

14 With these statements, Plaintiffs plausibly allege that officials were intent on effectuating 15 the goal of President Trump—namely, to end the purportedly broken TPS program. Such a 16 conclusion is a natural inference of the Defendants’ statements. At this stage of the litigation, 17 taken together, and reading the facts alleged in Plaintiffs’ complaint in a light most favorable to 18 Plaintiffs, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have sufficiently demonstrated that the Secretary made the 19 decisions to terminate TPS for Honduras, Nepal, and Nicaragua well before she considered 20 conditions in any of those countries. Compl. ¶ 45; Manzarek, 519 F.3d at 1031 (the court must 21 “accept[s] factual allegations in the complaint as true and construe[s] the pleadings in the light 22 most favorable to the nonmoving party”).

23 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ claim that the 24 Secretary’s decision was arbitrary and capricious because her decision was preordained and 25 pretextual rather than based on an objective review of the country conditions as required by the 26 TPS statute and the APA.

27 ii. Plaintiffs’ Plausibly Allege that the Secretary’s Ignored Intervening Country 28 Conditions in Violation of the TPS Statute.

1 Plaintiffs' second claim under the APA is that the Secretary failed to consider any country 2 conditions that were not directly related to the reason for the initial designation, thereby (1) 3 contravening the statutory mandate to base TPS decisions on a fulsome review of country 4 conditions and (2) arbitrarily breaking with past practice. ECF 121 at 11 (citing Compl. ¶¶ 40–42, 5 63, 68–69, 156(a)–(b)). Defendants argue that 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) imposes no requirement 6 on the Secretary to consider events or conditions beyond those which gave rise to the initial 7 designation when conducting a periodic review. ECF 128 at 11. Plaintiffs argue that the 8 complaint sufficiently alleges that the TPS statute requires review of intervening country 9 conditions and that the Secretary's review was inconsistent with mandate of the statute. ECF 121 10 at 12.

11 The Secretary must review the conditions within foreign states designated for TPS 12 periodically to determine, based on her findings, whether the conditions for such designation 13 continue to exist. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A)–(C). After conducting a review and consulting with 14 the appropriate government agencies, if the Secretary determines that the conditions for a TPS 15 designation no longer exist, she must terminate the designation. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(B). The 16 conditions for designation must be severe enough that “the foreign state is unable, temporarily, to 17 handle adequately the return to the state of aliens who are nationals of the state. Id. § 18 1254a(b)(1)(B)(ii). Moreover, the requirement to consult is not an empty obligation; rather, a 19 consultation required by a statute means that there must be a “meaningful exchange of 20 information.” Cal. Wilderness Coalition v. U.S. DOE, 631 F.3d 1072, 1086 (9th Cir. 2011); see also id. at 1088 (characterizing a statutory requirement to consult as an “affirmative duty” and 21 stating that the consultation must be “meaningful”). See Lands Council v. Powell, 395 F.3d 1019, 22 1026 (9th Cir. 2005) (“An agency’s action is arbitrary and capricious if the agency fails to 23 consider an important aspect of a problem, if the agency offers an explanation for the decision that 24 is contrary to the evidence, if the agency’s decision is so implausible that it could not be ascribed 25 to a difference in view or be the product of agency expertise, or if the agency’s decision is 26 contrary to the governing law.”).

27 The complaint alleges that the Secretary’s decision was not based on the statutorily 28

1 required country conditions review, but instead limited the analysis to focus on positive 2 improvements. ECF 110 ¶ 50. Plaintiffs allege that the “new selective country conditions 3 research system put in place for period reviews” ignored entire categories of conditions that have 4 previously been considered. Id. ¶ 63. Plaintiffs also point to the termination notices failure to 5 address food insecurity in Nepal, staggering crime in Honduras, or humanitarian crisis in 6 Nicaragua when describing the basis for terminating TPS. See Compl. ¶¶ 63, 66–69. The 7 Secretary’s omissions and explicitly narrow scope of review break with past agency practice in 8 which the DHS has considered holistically, the country conditions when engaging in the periodic 9 review process. Compl. ¶¶ 40–42; see also Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d at 350 (“[T]he DHS Secretary, 10 DHS, and USCIS had a longstanding practice of considering all country conditions when 11 undertaking the mandatory periodic review under the statute, regardless of their relation to the 12 originating condition.”); Ramos, 336 F. Supp. 3d at 1093 (“Intervening factors arising after a 13 country’s original TPS designation … were considered relevant to determining whether a country 14 continued to meet the conditions for continuing TPS designation.”). These allegations sufficiently 15 allege that the Secretary, in violation of the APA, broke from prior practice without explanation.
16 Compl. ¶¶ 40–42, 63, 66–69; see also Organized Vill. of Kake v. USDA, 795 F.3d 956, 966 (9th 17 Cir. 2015) (when an agency breaks with a long-standing past practice, it must “display[] 18 ‘awareness that it is changing position’” and provide “good reasons” for the new policy) (quoting 19 Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 US at 515–16).

20 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ claim that the 21 Secretary’s decision was arbitrary and capricious as contrary to the TPS statute and as an 22 unexplained departure from past agency practice.

23 iii. Plaintiffs’ Plausibly Allege that the Secretary Unlawfully Deviated from Past 24 Agency Practice in Setting a 60-Day Transition Period.

25 Plaintiffs’ next APA claim is that the Secretary failed to provide at least six-month orderly 26 transition period in an unacknowledged and unexplained deviation from historical practice.
27 Compl. ¶¶ 4, 160. Defendants argue that the Secretary complied with the statutory default 60-day 28 transition period which was consistent with past agency practice and that the DHS’s past practice

1 is insufficiently “firm” to trigger the change-in-position doctrine. ECF 110 at 17–18. Plaintiffs 2 respond that they have adequately alleged that, for the past two decades, the prevailing practice of 3 prior administrations was to provide at least 6 months after TPS termination date for holders to 4 transition, and that the departure from such a practice required acknowledgement and explanation.
5 ECF 121 at 10.

6 As discussed above, under the APA, an agency must “display awareness” of, and “offer 7 good reasons” for, a departure from a “decades-old practice.” Wages & White Lions Invs., L.L.C., 8 604 U.S. at 570. Under Wages and White Lion’s long-standing change-in-position doctrine, an 9 agency’s “consistent practice, whether adopted expressly in a holding or established impliedly 10 through repetition, sets the baseline from which future departures must be explained.” Id. at 583– 11 84. “The change-in-position doctrine asks two questions.” Wages and White Lions, LLC, 604 U.S.
12 at 569 (2025). “The first is whether an agency changed existing policy.” Id. Once a change in 13 agency position is identified, the doctrine poses a second question: Did the agency “display 14 awareness that it is changing position” and offer “good reasons for the new policy”? Id.

15 Here, the complaint sufficiently provides twenty-two years (of TPS’s thirty-five-year 16 history) of DHS’s practice of setting an orderly transition period of six to eighteen months after 17 the issuance of a TPS termination notice. Compl. ¶ 31. In contrast, the Honduras and Nicaragua 18 termination notices only provide that “[a] sixty-day orderly period of transition is consistent with 19 the precedent of previous TPS country terminations and makes clear that the United States is 20 committed to clarity and consistency.” See 90 Fed. Reg. 30091, 30088. Because these notices fail 21 to acknowledge or explain the departure from the decades-long practice of providing at least a 6-22 month transition period, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have plausibly raised a claim under the 23 APA. See Encino Motorcars, 579 U.S. at 222 (“It follows that an ‘[u]nexplained inconsistency’ in 24 agency policy is ‘a reason for holding an interpretation to be an arbitrary and capricious change 25 from agency practice.’”). Regarding Nepal, the TPS termination notice simply stated that “there is 26 no longer an environmental disaster or other situation causing substantial, but temporary, 27 disruption of living conditions and that Nepal can adequately handle the return of its nationals, and 28 considering other relevant factors, the Secretary has determined that a 60-day transition period is

1 sufficient and in accord with Executive Order 14159.” 90 Fed. Reg. 24153. The Secretary’s 2 footnote alluding to “certain other TPS designations were terminated without allowing for an 3 extended transition period,” id. at n.24, was insufficient to acknowledge and explain the departure 4 from the twenty-two-year practice of providing at least a 6-month transition period. See Enicino
5 Motorcars, 579 U.S. at 222 (“[T]he Department offered barely any explanation. A summary 6 discussion may suffice in other circumstances, but here—in particular because of decades of 7 industry reliance on the Department’s prior policy—the explanation fell short of the agency’s duty 8 to explain why it deemed it necessary to overrule its previous position.”).

9 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ claim that the 10 Secretary’s decision was arbitrary and capricious as an unexplained departure from past agency 11 practice.

12 iv. Plaintiffs’ Plausible Allege that the Secretary’s Termination Decision was 13 Motivated by Racial Animus.

14 Finally, the complaint alleges that the Secretary’s decision violated the Equal Protection 15 component of the Fifth Amendment because her decision was motivated, at least in part, by 16 intentional race- and national-origin-based animus. Compl. ¶¶ 5, 164. Defendants argue that the 17 rational basis test set forth in Trump v. Hawaii should govern Plaintiffs’ claim and that under the 18 Trump v. Hawaii standard, Plaintiffs fail to state a claim. ECF 110 at 19. Plaintiffs assert that (i) 19 Plaintiffs state a plausible claim of impermissible animus under Arlington Heights; and (ii) 20 Plaintiffs state a plausible claim of impermissible animus under Trump v. Hawaii. ECF 121 at 13.

21 a. Arlington Heights Governs Plaintiffs’ Constitutional Claim

22 Defendants argue that because Plaintiffs’ assertions implicate immigration policy, the 23 Court may not look behind the facially legitimate reasons offered for the termination decisions as 24 set forth in Trump v. Hawaii. ECF 110 at 19 (citing Trump v. Hawaii, 585 U.S. 667, 703–04 25 (2018)). Plaintiffs argue that Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252 26 (1977) provides the governing legal standard for their Equal Protection claim because Plaintiffs 27 allege that the Secretary’s decisions were motivate by racial animus. ECF 121 at 13.

28 Trump v. Hawaii involved the initial entry of foreign nationals. In Trump v. Hawaii, the 1 Supreme Court reviewed an Equal Protection claim challenging an executive order issued by 2 President Trump restricting entry by foreign nationals from specified, majority-Muslim counties.

3 Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 673–77. The Supreme Court applied rational basis review to this claim 4 because the subject matter of the case involved immigration and the area of national security. Id.
5 at 703. Unlike, Hawaii, the Secretary’s TPS decisions here apply largely to foreign nationals who 6 are already physically present in the United States. Foreign nationals who are physically present 7 in the United States may state a claim for violation of the Equal Protection component of the Fifth 8 Amendment. See Kwai Fun Wong v. United States, 373 F.3d 952, 970–73 (9th Cir. 2004); see also Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 210 (1982) (“Indeed, we have clearly held that the Fifth
9 Amendment protects aliens whose presence in this country is unlawful from invidious
10 Amendment protects aliens whose presence in this country is unlawful from invidious 11 discrimination by the Federal Government.” (citing Mathews, 426 U.S. at 77)).

12 In contrast to Trump v. Hawaii, Arlington Heights involved the application of the Fifth 13 Amendment to individuals in the United States. In Arlington Heights, a board of trustee’s denial 14 of low and moderate-income housing was found to be motivated by racial discrimination. 429 15 U.S. at 258–59. The Supreme Court held that a violation of the Fifth Amendment’s Equal 16 Protection Clause requires “[p]roof of racially discriminatory intent or purpose” and that a plaintiff 17 need not “prove that the challenged action rested solely on racially discriminatory purposes.” 429 18 U.S. at 265. The Supreme Court recognized that a court’s analysis into “whether invidious 19 discriminatory purpose was a motivating factor demands a sensitive inquiry into such 20 circumstantial and direct evidence of intent as may be available.” Id. at 266.

21 Here, because the Secretary’s TPS terminations involves individuals already physically 22 present in the United States and because Plaintiffs allege that the Secretary’s decisions were 23 motivated by racial animus, the Court applies the Arlington Heights standard. Indeed, the 24 “application of the Arlington Heights framework is appropriate to evaluate whether plaintiffs 25 plead discriminatory animus.” La Clinica de la Raza v. Trump, 706 F. Supp. 3d 903, 931 (N.D.
26 Cal. 2020); Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña, 515 U.S. 200, 227 (1995) (“[A]ll racial 27 classifications, imposed by whatever federal, state, or local governmental actor, must be analyzed 28 by a reviewing court under strict scrutiny.”); see also DHS v. Regents of Univ. of Cal., 591 U.S. 1, 1 34-35 (2020) (applying the Arlington Heights factors to plaintiffs' Equal Protection claim).

2 Plaintiffs specifically allege that the Secretary's Nepal, Honduras, and Nicaragua TPS 3 terminations were motivated by racial animus. See Compl. ¶¶ 86–94, 95–128, 156. These 4 allegations implicate the Court's heightened scrutiny under Arlington Heights. See Regents of the 5 Univ. of California, 591 U.S. at 34 (“To plead animus, a plaintiff must raise a plausible inference 6 that an ‘invidious discriminatory purpose was a motivating factor’ in the relevant decision.”) 7 (quoting Arlington Heights, 429 U.S. at 266). Therefore, the Court finds that the Arlington
8 Heights standard governs.

9 b. Plaintiffs Allege Sufficient Facts to State a Claim Under the Governing 10 Standard in *Arlington Heights

11 Defendants argue that, even under Arlington Heights, the Secretary's terminations were 12 consistent with the TPS statute because she made an informed judgment that the conditions for 13 designation under the statute were no longer met. ECF 110 at 22. Plaintiffs argue the complaint 14 sufficiently alleges animus toward similarly situated racial groups. ECF 121 at 16–19.

15 “Under Arlington Heights, a plaintiff must ‘simply produce direct or circumstantial 16 evidence demonstrating that a discriminatory reason more likely than not motivated’ the defendant 17 and that the defendant’s actions adversely affected the plaintiff in some way.” Ave. 6E Invs., LLC 18 v. City of Yuma, Ariz., 818 F.3d 493, 504 (9th Cir. 2016) (internal quotations omitted). “A 19 plaintiff does not have to prove that the discriminatory purpose was the sole purpose of the 20 challenged action, but only that it was a ‘motivating factor.’” Id. “The court analyzes whether a 21 discriminatory purpose motivated the defendant by examining the events leading up to the 22 challenged decision and the legislative history behind it, the defendant’s departure from normal 23 procedures or substantive conclusions, and the historical background of the decision and whether 24 it creates a disparate impact.” Id.

25 Plaintiffs sufficiently allege a claim under the Fifth Amendment that Secretary Noem, and 26 other officials in this administration, held animus against immigrants covered by the TPS program.
27 In a January 29, 2025, post on X, Secretary Noem announced that she would end a Biden order 28 that allowed Venezuelans to stay in the country and “violate our laws.” Compl. ¶ 75. In a March

1 20, 2025, post on X, Secretary Noem associated “migration management” with “sav[ing]
2 American lives and get[ting] criminals off our streets!” Id. ¶ 94. In a May 19, 2025, post on X, 3 DHS equated TPS holders with “MS-13 gang members,” “known terrorists,” and “murderers.” Id.
4 ¶ 91. These statements are consistent with similar statements by President Trump including one 5 occurrence in which he stated that migrants were “poisoning the blood of our country.” Id. ¶ 97.
6 (President Trump asking why people “could not come from nice countries . . . like Denmark, 7 Switzerland, and Norway”); see id. ¶ 98 (President Trump “How about allowing people to come to 8 an open border . . . many of them murdered far more than one person, and they’re now happily 9 living in the United States. You know now a murderer, I believe this, it’s in their genes. And we 10 got a lot of bad genes in our country right now.”); see also id. ¶ 86 (Secretary Noem describing 11 immigration as an “invasion happening on purpose . . . to remake the foundation of this country”).

12 These statements reflect a stereotyping of the immigrants protected under the TPS program 13 as criminal invaders and perpetuate the discriminatory belief that certain immigrant populations 14 will replace the white population. ECF 17-20 ¶ 19; see Nat'l TPS All., 773 F. Supp. 3d at 860 15 (“Acting on the basis of a negative group stereotype and generalizing such stereotype to the entire 16 group is the classic example of racism.”); Korematsu, 323 U.S. 233, 235 (1944) (Murphy, J., 17 dissenting) (characterizing the majority decision upholding the mass internment of Japanese 18 Americans as falling into the “ugly abyss of racism”; noting that the “forced exclusion [of 19 Japanese Americans] was the result in good measure of the erroneous assumption of racial guilt . .
20 .”). Here, Plaintiffs’ constitutional claim survives Defendants’ motion to dismiss because the facts 21 set forth in their complaint “raise a plausible inference that an ‘invidious discriminatory purpose 22 was a motivating factor’” for the Secretary’s decisions. Regents, 591 U.S. at 34 (quoting 23 Arlington Heights, 429 U.S. at 266). Defendants’ argument that the Court should not consider the 24 statements of officials other than the Secretary because they are irrelevant and concern the 25 “discriminatory motive” of “different government official[s]” is unavailing as they provide 26 circumstantial evidence of the Secretary’s decision-making process. Arlington Heights, 429 U.S.
27 at 266–69 (considering statements by decisionmakers and other circumstantial evidence of 28 discriminatory intent).

1 Accordingly, under Arlington Heights, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have stated a claim 2 upon which relief may be granted, and the Court denies Defendants' motion to dismiss for failure 3 to state a claim.

4 c. Plaintiffs Allege Sufficient Facts to State a Claim Under *Trump v. Hawaii

5 Defendants argue that the Secretary's decisions are legally sufficient under Trump v. Hawaii.
6 Trump v. Hawaii. ECF 110 at 19. Plaintiffs argue that, even under Trump v. Hawaii's rational basis
7 standard, the Secretary's invocation of racist tropes reveal that her decision was not rationally 8 related to the stated goal. ECF 121 at 15 (citing Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 704–05).

9 As discussed above, the Court finds that Arlington Heights applies to Plaintiffs' claims.
10 However, even if the Court evaluated the complaint under the standard articulated in Trump v. Hawaii, 11 the claims are still sufficient.

12 Trump v. Hawaii involved the President's proclamation that "placed entry restrictions on 13 the nationals of eight foreign states whose systems for managing and sharing information about 14 their nationals the President deemed inadequate." 585 U.S. at 677. The Supreme Court limited 15 the Court's review of "any rule of constitutional law that would inhibit the flexibility of the 16 President to respond to changing world conditions." 585 U.S. at 704. Trump v. Hawaii, 17 constrains the Court's "inquiry into matters of entry and national security," and Defendants fail to 18 explain how the Secretary's TPS terminations concern matters of entry and national security. 585 19 U.S. at 667. Trump v. Hawaii concerned the exclusion of non-citizens from abroad, where the 20 government's immigration powers are at their greatest. 585 U.S. at 705 n.5 ("such a 21 circumscribed inquiry applies to any constitutional claim concerning the entry of foreign 22 nationals"). Although "[t]he President has vital power in the field of foreign affairs, so does 23 Congress, and the President does not have the authority to override immigration laws enacted by 24 Congress." Biden v. Texas, 597 U.S. 785, 830 (2022) (Alito, J., dissenting).

25 Here, Plaintiffs sufficiently allege a claim under Trump v. Hawaii because decisions about 26 the rights afforded to TPS holders based on negative racial stereotypes is completely divorced 27 from any "facially legitimate and bona fide" reason. Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 703; see id. at 706 28 (finding that agency action does not survive rational basis review if the Court cannot "discern a

1 relationship to legitimate state interests" or if the action is "inexplicable by anything but 2 animus."). Instead, Congress enacted the TPS program to formalize humanitarian protections and 3 offer relief to nonimmigrants from foreign states which are not able to adequately house its 4 nationals. See NTPSA I, 150 F.4th at 1008. In light of this goal, the Secretary may not take steps 5 that are contrary to the express or implied will of Congress or the mandates of the federal 6 constitution. Id. (citing Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 637 (1952)) 7 ("[W]hen the President takes measures incompatible with the expressed or implied will of 8 Congress, his power is at its lowest ebb, for then he can rely only upon his own constitutional 9 powers minus any constitutional powers of Congress over the matter.").

10 Accordingly, under Trump v. Hawaii the Court finds that Plaintiffs have plausible stated a 11 claim upon which relief may be granted, and the Court denies Defendants' motion to dismiss for 12 failure to state a claim.

13 * * *

14 For the reasons stated above, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have alleged facts that, when 15 read in favor of Plaintiffs, plausibly state claims under the APA and the federal constitution 16 consistent with the pleading standard required by Rule 8(c). Accordingly, the Court denies 17 Defendants' motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6).

18 IV. MOTION TO EXCLUDE EXPERT TESTIMONY

19 Defendants seek to exclude the testimony of Elliott Young, Stacy Tolchin, Hannah Postel, 20 Melanie Morten, Tara Watson, Tom Wong, and Dana Frank. ECF 143.

21 Federal Rule of Evidence 702 allows a qualified expert to testify "in the form of an opinion 22 or otherwise" where:

23 (a) the expert's scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge 24 will help the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a 25 fact in issue; (b) the testimony is based on sufficient facts or data; (c) the testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods; and (d) the expert has reliably applied the principles and methods to the facts of the case.

26 Id.

27 In determining whether the requirements of Rule 702 are met, Courts follow the approach 28

1 set forth in Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc.:

2 [T]he trial judge must determine . . . whether the expert is proposing 3 to testify to (1) scientific knowledge that (2) will assist the trier of fact 4 to understand or determine a fact in issue. This entails a preliminary 5 assessment of whether the reasoning or methodology underlying the 6 testimony is scientifically valid and of whether that reasoning or 7 methodology properly can be applied to the facts in issue.

8 509 U.S. 579, 590 (1993). The “scientific knowledge” requirement concerns the reliability of an 9 expert’s opinion and can be met by “[e]stablishing that an expert’s proffered testimony grows out of 10 pre-litigation research or that the expert’s research has been subjected to peer review.” Daubert v.
11 Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 43 F.3d 1311, 1318 (9th Cir. 1995); see Kumho Tire Co., Ltd
12 v. Carmichael, 26 U.S. 137, 147 (1999) (“[T]he Rule applies its reliability standard to all 13 ‘scientific,’ ‘technical,’ or ‘other specialized’ matters within its scope.”). Rule 702’s second 14 requirement, that an expert will “assist the trier of fact to understand or determine a fact in issue,” 15 “means that the evidence will assist the trier of fact to understand or determine a fact in issue.”
16 Cooper v. Brown, 510 F.3d 870, 942 (9th Cir. 2007); see Primiano v. Cook, 598 F.3d 558, 564 17 (9th Cir. 2010) (“The requirement that the opinion testimony assist the trier of fact goes primarily 18 to relevance.”) (internal quotation omitted).

19 A. Dr. Elliot Young’s Testimony is Admissible under Rule 702

20 Defendants argue that Dr. Young’s expert report and testimony should be excluded 21 because he (1) is unreliable and (2) not relevant to the issues on summary judgment. ECF 143.

22 1. Dr. Young’s Expert Opinion is Reliable

23 Defendants argue that Dr. Young is not qualified to provide an expert opinion on TPS 24 holders and the current country conditions in Honduras and Nicaragua because his report includes 25 overly broad statistics, cites non-dispositive statutes, and does not provide evidentiary support or 26 data on the number of individuals denied initial or renewal of TPS based on criminal activity.
27 ECF 143 at 11–13. Defendants also argue that Dr. Young does not have experience in economics 28 and is not an expert in country conditions in Honduras and Nicaragua. Id. at 12–13. Plaintiffs argue that Defendants “misconstrue[] the purpose of [Dr. Young’s] testimony” and “Dr. Young’s discussion of country conditions casts doubt on Defendants’ motivations.” ECF 168 at 12–13.

1 Expert opinions are “reliable if the knowledge underlying it has a reliable basis in the 2 knowledge and experience of the relevant discipline.” City of Pomona v. SQM North America 3 Corp., 750 F.3d 1036, 1044 (9th Cir. 2014). “The district court is not tasked with deciding 4 whether the expert is right or wrong, just whether his testimony has substance such that it would 5 be helpful to a jury.” Alaska Rent-A-Car, Inc. v. Avis Budget Group, Inc., 738 F.3d 960, 969–70
6 (9th Cir. 2013).

7 Here, Dr. Young relies on his personal and professional knowledge to conclude that “[t]he 8 statements made by President Trump, DHS Secretary Noem, and other Trump administration 9 officials about Central American migrants, including TPS holders, can be understood in the 10 context of a long history of the use of similar statements about disfavored immigrant groups to 11 justify restrictive immigration laws.” ECF 168-6 ¶¶ 2–6; 47.

12 To the extent Defendants challenge Dr. Young’s expertise, the Court finds that Dr. Young 13 is qualified to opine on how the debate over TPS for Honduras and Nicaragua, and more broadly 14 the debate over TPS generally, reflects the history of racism in immigration policy debates in the 15 United States. As Plaintiffs concede, Dr. Young’s opinions on country conditions provides 16 context to the larger issue of Defendants’ motivations for terminating TPS. ECF 168 at 12–13.
17 Notably, Dr. Young is a Professor of History at Lewis & Clark College, where he has “taught 18 Latin American and immigration history for more than 27 years, and was director of Latin 19 American Studies for more than a decade.” Id. ¶ 7. He has served as chair of the History 20 department; director of Ethnic Studies; co-director of the Stanford Migration & Asylum Lab; co-21 author of the 2023 Honduras Country Conditions Bulletins; and is currently editing a 2025
22 Nicaragua Country Conditions Bulletin. Id.; see Kumho Tire Co., Ltd v. Carmichael, 526 U.S.
23 137, 150 (1999) (“[T]he relevant reliability concerns may focus upon personal knowledge or 24 experience. As the Solicitor General points out, there are many different kinds of experts, and 25 many different kinds of expertise.”). Dr. Young has also authored articles that have appeared in 26 scholarly journals, founded the Nicaragua Country Conditions Bulletin, and is the founder and 27 director of the Migration Scholar Collaborative. ECF 168-6 ¶¶ 9, 12.

28 To the extent Defendants challenge Dr. Young’s methodology, Defendants improperly

1 challenge the weight rather than the inadmissibility of Dr. Young’s expert opinion. See Alaska
2 Rent-A-Car, Inc., 738 F.3d at 970 (“Avis challenges three aspects of the witness’s testimony:
3 using Alamo as the comparator, using the national rather than the Alaska market as a baseline, and 4 extrapolating from the Juneau market to the entire Alaska market. . . . They all go to the weight of 5 the testimony and its credibility, not its admissibility.”). Indeed, “[v]igorous cross-examination, 6 presentation of contrary evidence, and careful instruction on the burden of proof are the traditional 7 and appropriate means of attacking shaky but admissible evidence.” Daubert v. Merrell Dow 8 Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 596 (1993).

9 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants’ motion to exclude Dr. Young’s expert opinion 10 to the extent Defendants argue that Dr. Young’s expert opinion is unreliable.

11 2. Dr. Young’s Expert Opinion is Relevant to the Issues on Summary
12 Judgment

13 Defendants argue that Dr. Young’s claim that he has always been found to be an expert by 14 immigration courts is not dispositive to this Court’s determination. ECF 143 at 13. Defendants 15 also argue that Dr. Young’s testimony is irrelevant as to whether the Secretary lawfully exercised 16 her authority to terminate TPS for Honduras and Nicaragua. Id. at 18–19. Plaintiffs argue that Dr.
17 Young’s testimony provides historical context surrounding the Secretary’s statements. See ECF 18 168 at 9–12; ECF 184 at 3.

19 The Court agrees that Dr. Young’s opinion on “how the debate over Temporary Protected 20 Status (TPS) for Honduras and Nicaragua, and more broadly the debate over TPS generally, 21 reflects the history of racism in immigration policy debates in the United States” is relevant to 22 Plaintiffs’ equal protection claim. Defendants seek summary judgment on Plaintiffs’ equal 23 protection claim, arguing that Plaintiffs fail to show a discriminatory animus. ECF 142 at 19–20.
24 Plaintiffs argue that summary judgment is not warranted because a genuine issue of material fact 25 precludes summary judgment. ECF 167 at 20; see id. (“Defendants still argue Secretary Noem’s 26 statements and actions were non-discriminatory and that her termination decisions were based 27 only on the statutorily required review of country conditions . . . while Plaintiffs contend—28 supported by extensive expert testimony and a growing record—that her statements and actions

1 reveal impermissible animus.”). Because the parties actively dispute whether the Secretary’s 2 statements were motivated by racial animus, Dr. Young’s opinion on the topic of racial animus is 3 relevant to the issues before this Court. See City of Pomona, 750 F.3d at 1044 (“Expert opinion 4 testimony is relevant if the knowledge underlying it has a valid connection to the pertinent 5 inquiry.”) (internal quotations omitted); In re Viagra (Sildenafil Citrate) and Cialis (Tadalafil)
6 Prod. Liab. Litig., 424 F. Supp. 3d 781, 789 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 2020) (“[T]he expert testimony
7 must ‘fit’ the question the jury must answer . . . This bar is cleared where the evidence ‘logically 8 advances a material aspect of the proposing party’s case.’”) (internal citations and quotations 9 omitted).

10 Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants’ motion to exclude Dr. Young’s expert opinion 11 to the extent Defendants argue that the opinion on how the debate over Temporary Protected 12 Status (TPS) for Honduras and Nicaragua, and more broadly the debate over TPS generally, 13 reflects the history of racism in immigration policy debates in the United States” is irrelevant to 14 the Court’s analysis. However, as Plaintiffs concede, Dr. Young’s expert opinion on the country 15 conditions of Honduras and Nicaragua shall be limited to the extent Dr. Young opines on how 16 “country conditions cast doubt on Defendants’ motivations.” ECF 168 at 13.

17 B. Plaintiffs Concede that the Court Need Not Consider Stacy Tolchin, Hannah 18 Postel, Melanie Morten, Tara Watson, Tom Wong, and Dana Frank Expert Reports

19 During oral argument, Plaintiffs conceded that the Court need not consider the expert 20 reports of Stacy Tolchin, Hannah Postel, Melanie Morten, Tara Watson, Tom Wong, and Dana 21 Frank. See also ECF 184 at 1 (“Plaintiffs are not relying on Dr. Wong’s declaration for their 22 summary judgment motion, and the Court does not need to consider his declaration to resolve the 23 MSJ.”); id. at 2 (“Plaintiffs do not contend this Court must analyze the consequences of 24 terminating TPS to resolve the pending summary judgment motions.”).

25 Accordingly, the Court grants Defendants’ motion to exclude expert testimony to the 26 extent Defendants seek to exclude the expert reports Stacy Tolchin, Hannah Postel, Melanie 27 Morten, Tara Watson, Tom Wong, and Dana Frank.

V. MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENTA. Legal Standard

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 provides that a “court shall grant summary judgment [to a moving party] if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). An issue of fact is genuine only if there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to find for the nonmoving party. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-49 (1986). “The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence . . . will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the [nonmoving party].” Id. at 252. At the summary judgment stage, evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in the nonmovant’s favor. See id. at 255.

Where a plaintiff moves for summary judgment on claims that it has brought (i.e., for which it has the burden of proof), it “must prove each element essential of the claims . . . by undisputed facts.” Cabo Distrib. Co. v. Brady, 821 F. Supp. 601, 607 (N.D. Cal. 1992); see also Fontenot v. Upjohn Co., 780 F.2d 1190, 1194 (5th Cir. 1986) (stating that, “if the movant bears the burden of proof on an issue, either because he is the plaintiff or as a defendant he is asserting an affirmative defense, he must establish beyond peradventure all of the essential elements of the claim or defense to warrant judgment in his favor”) (emphasis omitted).

Where a defendant moves for summary judgment based on a claim for which the plaintiff bears the burden of proof, the defendant need only point to the plaintiff’s failure “to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to [the plaintiff’s] case.” Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986).

B. Discussion

Plaintiffs seek summary judgment on Plaintiffs’ claims that Secretary’s TPS termination decisions violate the APA because the Secretary (1) executed a preordained, political decision and (2) ignored intervening crisis as required by 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A). ECF 144 at 21. Defendants move for cross summary judgment on both claims raised by Plaintiffs, and additionally seek summary judgment on Plaintiffs’ claims that the Secretary’s decisions (1)

1 violated the APA by providing only a 60-day orderly transition period, and (2) violated the 2 constitution because the decisions were motivated by racially discriminatory intent or purpose.
3 ECF 142 at 18.

4 1. The Secretary's Terminations of TPS for Honduras, Nicaragua, and Nepal
5 Were Preordained and Not Based on Interagency Consultation or Country Conditions Review

6 Plaintiffs' first claim under the APA is that the Secretary did not comply with the TPS 7 statute's requirement that TPS decisions be made after interagency consultation and an objective 8 review of the country conditions. ECF 144 at 16. Plaintiffs argue that the Court should grant 9 summary judgment on Plaintiffs' first APA claim because Defendants (a) made a preordained 10 decision to terminate TPS and (b) did not base their termination decisions on interagency 11 consultation or country conditions review. ECF 144 at 14–18. Defendants argue that summary 12 judgment should be granted in Defendants' favor because Secretary's termination decisions were 13 consistent with the TPS statute and based on a proper review of the necessary facts. ECF 142 at 14 12–18; ECF 166 at 6.

15 The APA provides that “[a] person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or 16 adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action within the meaning of a relevant statute, is 17 entitled to judicial review thereof.” 5 U.S.C. § 702. “Courts must exercise their independent
18 judgment in deciding whether an agency has acted within its statutory authority, as the APA 19 requires.” Loper Bright Enters, 603 U.S. at 412. The APA also requires Courts to “hold unlawful 20 and set aside agency action, findings, and conclusions found to be . . . arbitrary, capricious, an 21 abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(a). 8 U.S.C. § 22 1254a(b)(3)(A) requires the Secretary to make a determination of a country’s TPS designation 23 “after consultation with appropriate agencies” and upon “review of the conditions in the foreign 24 state.” Moreover, the Supreme Court has held that agencies must offer the true reason for a 25 decision. “The reasoned explanation requirement of administrative law . . . is meant to ensure that 26 agencies offer genuine justifications for important decisions, reasons that can be scrutinized by 27 courts and the interested public. Accepting contrived reasons would defeat the purpose of the 28 enterprise.” Dep’t of Com., 588 U.S. at 785. TPS decisions that are “preordained” or based on

1 “political influence,” rather than country conditions, violate the APA. See Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d 2 at 345–46 (quoting 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)).

3 The Court agrees that the Secretary’s Honduras, Nicaragua, and Nepal TPS termination
4 decisions were preordained. Before reviewing any country conditions reports, the Secretary, at her 5 confirmation hearing, categorized TPS as a program that had “been abused and manipulated by the 6 Biden administration” at stated that the program “will no longer be allowed . . . these extensions 7 going forward the way that they are.” ECF 145-2 at 104. After assuming her role as Secretary, 8 and during an interview with NewsNation, the Secretary promised that “when the president gives a 9 directive, the Department of Homeland Security will follow it and we’re going to make sure that 10 those who come in under a program . . .” ECF 145-6. That directive was to terminate TPS.

11 Indeed, according to President Trump, “you have to remove the people . . . we cannot 12 destroy our country . . . You have to remove the people, and you have to bring them back to their 13 own country. . . I’d revoke [TPS], and I’d bring them back to their country.” ECF 145-3 at 14–16; 14 see also ECF 145-4 at 2 (Vice President Vance stating, “[w]e’re going to stop doing mass grants 15 of Temporary Protected Status.”). These sentiments were later etched into the Invasion EO, which 16 claimed an “unprecedented flood of illegal immigration into the United States” and ordered the 17 Secretary to “rescind the policy decisions of the previous administration that led to the increased 18 or continued presence of illegal aliens in the United States, and align any and all departmental 19 activities with the policies set out by this order and the immigration laws.” 90 Fed. Reg. 8443.

20 The Secretary’s statements after taking office further show a bias against TPS. DHS stated 21 that, by vacating or partially vacating TPS, it was “restoring integrity in our immigration system 22 and ensuring that TPS remains temporary,” and fulfilling “President Trump’s promise to rescind 23 policies that were magnets for illegal immigration and inconsistent with the law.” ECF 145-4; 24 ECF 145-13. DHS also issued a press release that said, “[f]or decades the TPS systems has been 25 exploited and abused.” ECF 145-5. According to DHS, a termination of TPS “is part of President 26 Trump’s promise to rescind policies that were magnets for illegal immigration and inconsistent 27 with the law.” Id. On May 19, 2025, less than a month before Nepal’s TPS termination notice 28 was posted and approximately two months before Honduras and Nicaragua’s TPS termination

1 notices were posted, DHS posted on social media: “The Biden Administration exploited 2 Temporary Protected Status to let half a million poorly vetted migrants into this country – from 3 MS-13 gang members to known terrorists and murderers.” ECF 145-14.

4 The Secretary’s decision-making processes further demonstrate that her termination 5 decisions were preordained. Notably, for Honduras and Nicaragua, the Secretary drafted her 6 decision memos (“DM”) terminating TPS before receiving updated country conditions reports 7 from the Department of State. See ECF 176-22 at 3 (“[T]he DM is now ready to go . . . We did 8 not receive a recommendation from DOS. You are correct that DOS will not provide country 9 conditions anymore.”); see also ECF 145-21 (“I wanted to check in on about COI for Nicaragua 10 and Honduras. We are currently prepping both DMs to circulate this week, but I am not sure we 11 have the COI from RRU. . .Do you have an ETA?”); compare ECF 145-31 (decision memos 12 written by April 7) with ECF 145-21 (DHS personnel acknowledging lack of country conditions 13 information on April 8). In the case of Nepal, Defendants recognized they lacked “an updated 14 DOS report,” ECF 145-35, and downplayed the importance of the report because it supported their 15 desired result: “the recommendation was to terminate so we should move forward.” ECF 176-20; 16 see ECF 63; ECF 64 (CAR indices for Nepal and Nicaragua, lacking any contemporaneous State 17 Department country conditions analysis or recommendation letter). The Secretary’s failure to 18 consult with the Department of State before deciding whether to terminate TPS directly conflicts 19 with the TPS statute, which specifically requires that, when conducting a periodic review of a 20 designated country’s conditions, that the Secretary reach her decision, “after consultation with 21 appropriate agencies of the Government.” 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) (emphasis added). Failure 22 to comply with the TPS statute violates the APA. See Lands Council, 395 F.3d at 1026 (“An 23 agency’s action is arbitrary and capricious . . . if the agency’s decision is contrary to the governing 24 law.”).

25 The record reflects that the Secretary relied on skewed data to terminate TPS for Honduras, 26 Nicaragua, and Nepal. In requesting country conditions reports, DHS personnel requested revised 27 reports that “only include[d] around 1 page of country conditions” and “[i]nclude[d] any 28 improvements” without “mention[ing] environmental concerns or climate change.” ECF 176-2.

1 Researchers had their team “revise the reports for Nepal, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Haiti to make 2 them consistent with [these] new guidelines.” Id. DHS personnel also added a “national interest
3 analysis” based on “data/analysis.” ECF 176-33 at 6 (“OP&S is working on improving the TPS 4 decision memos and we are adding a national interest analysis We are wanting to provide 5 data/analysis in our TPS decision memo.”); id. (“We’d like to request another analysis . . . [t]his 6 time it’s for Cameroon and Nepal.”). However, as described by policy analysts, this “data” 7 involved “[s]uch a LOW number of fraud” for Nepal that “[i]t’s so laughable that it’s even in the 8 paper.” ECF 176-33 at 2; see id. (showing 1 “Found Fraud” out of 12,859 total for Nepal). DHS 9 personnel sought the “same type of data” analysts provided for Nepal, “but this time for 10 Honduras and Nicaragua.” ECF 176-34 at 5.

11 After receiving this data, DHS personnel contemplated how to explain their TPS 12 terminations: “[t]he problem is if we sing the praises of Honduras (which we certainly do), then it 13 calls into question why we’re also terminating the program in Nicaragua, with its murderous, 14 dictatorial regime. Which in turn might open us up to questions about why we’re terminating for 15 both countries when the conditions on the ground are so much better in Honduras.” ECF 176-11.

16 Collectively, and in exercising its “independent judgment in deciding whether [the 17 Secretary] acted within [her] statutory authority,” the Court finds that Plaintiffs have provided 18 sufficient evidence to demonstrate that the Secretary terminated TPS for Nepal, Honduras, and 19 Nicaragua based on a pre-ordained decision to limit TPS. See Loper Bright, 603 U.S. at 412. The 20 record specifically reflects that, before taking office, the Secretary made a pre-ordained decision to 21 end TPS and influenced the conditions review process to facilitate TPS terminations for Honduras, 22 Nicaragua, and Nepal. See Dep’t of Commerce v. N.Y., 588 U.S. 752, 782–83 (2019) (“The 23 evidence showed that the Secretary was determined to reinstate a citizenship question from the 24 time he entered office; instructed his staff to make it happen; waited while Commerce officials 25 explored whether another agency would request census-based citizenship data; subsequently 26 contacted the Attorney General himself to ask if DOJ would make the request; and adopted the 27 Voting Rights Act rationale late in the process.”); Saget v. Trump, 379 F. Supp. 3d 280, 347 28 (E.D.N.Y. 2019) (“Plaintiffs have proffered significant evidence showing Acting Secretary Duke,

1 DHS, USCIS, and the Department of State reverse engineered the TPS review process to achieve a 2 desired political outcome: the termination of Haiti’s TPS. Such an outcome-determinative process
3 violates the mandatory periodic review process of the TPS statute.”)

4 Accordingly, the Court grants Plaintiffs’ motion for partial summary judgment on their 5 first APA claim that the Secretary’s decision was arbitrary and capricious because her decision 6 was preordained and not based on an objective review of the country conditions, after consultation 7 with the appropriate interagency department, as required by the TPS statute and the APA. The 8 Court denies Defendants’ motion for summary judgment to the extent that Defendants seek 9 summary judgment on Plaintiffs’ first APA claim.

10 2. The Secretary’s Terminations of TPS for Honduras, Nicaragua, and Nepal
11 Were Contrary to Law for Failing to Take into Account Intervening Conditions

12 Plaintiffs argue that the Secretary failed to consider conditions beyond those related to the 13 crisis that triggered the TPS designation in assessing the countries improvements. ECF 144 at 20.
14 Defendants argue that the Secretary is limited to consideration of the conditions which gave rise to 15 the original TPS designation. ECF 142 at 13. Plaintiffs respond that the TPS statute and the 16 APA’s change-in-position doctrine required the Secretary to provide a reason for ignoring 17 intervening country conditions. ECF 175 at 15.

18 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) provides that, on periodic review, the Secretary, “after 19 consultation with appropriate agencies of the Government, shall review the conditions in the 20 foreign state . . . for which a designation is in effect under this subsection and shall determine 21 whether the conditions for such designation continue to be met.” If she determines the foreign 22 state “no longer continues to meet the conditions for designation,” she “shall terminate” the 23 designation. Id. § 1254a(b)(3)(B). If she “does not determine . . . that a foreign state . . . no longer 24 meets the conditions for designation under paragraph (1), the period of designation of the foreign 25 state is extended.” Id. § 1254a(b)(3)(C).

26 The parties dispute whether the language in § 1254a(b)(3)(A) which requires the Secretary, 27 in conducting a periodic review, to “determine whether the conditions for such designation . . .
28 continue to be met” requires the Secretary to consider factors beyond those which gave rise to the

1 initial designation. Compare ECF 144 at 21 with ECF 166 at 17. The Court, therefore, must 2 engage in statutory construction to resolve the parties' dispute.

3 Beginning with the language of the statute, the Court finds that the TPS statute's periodic 4 review provision, which requires the Secretary to "determine whether the conditions for such 5 designation . . . continue to be met," contains genuine ambiguity. 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) 6 (emphasis added); compare ECF 144 at 21 with ECF 166 at 17. "A statute is ambiguous . . . if it is 7 subject to more than one reasonable interpretation." John v. United States, 247 F.3d 1032, 1042 8 (9th Cir. 2001). Here, the phrase "such designation" in 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) is subject to 9 more than one reasonable interpretation—whether the language refers to the initial designation or 10 to the broader TPS designation is not quickly discernable from the text itself.

11 The Court, therefore, must look to the statutory scheme and legislative purpose in 12 determining whether 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) requires the Secretary to consider factors beyond 13 that which gave rise to the initial designation when conducting a periodic review. See Hernandez 14 v. Williams, Zinman & Parham PC, 829 F.3d 1068, 1073 (9th Cir. 2016) ("But if the plain 15 meaning of the statutory text remains unclear after consulting internal indicia of congressional 16 intent, we may then turn to extrinsic indicators, such as legislative history, to help resolve the 17 ambiguity.") (quotations and citations omitted); King v. Burwell, 576 U.S. 473, 492, (2015) 18 ("Given that the text is ambiguous, we must turn to the broader structure of the Act to determine 19 the meaning of [the provision at issue]."). The Court's "duty is to find that interpretation which 20 can most fairly be said to be imbedded in the statute, in the sense of being most harmonious with 21 its scheme and with the general purposes that Congress manifested." United States v. Sagg, 125 22 F.3d 1294, 1295 (9th Cir. 1997). Under Loper Bright, the Court "must exercise [its] independent
23 judgment in deciding whether an agency has acted within its statutory authority, as the APA
24 requires." 603 U.S. at 412. "Courts need not and under the [Administrative Procedure Act] may 25 not defer to an agency interpretation of the law simply because a statute is ambiguous. Id. at 413.

26 In reviewing the statutory scheme and legislative purpose of the TPS statute, the Court 27 finds that interpreting "such designation" in 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) to mean the broader TPS 28 designation—not the initial designation—is most harmonious with the TPS scheme and general

1 purpose of TPS. “In enacting the TPS statute [in 1990], Congress designed a system of temporary 2 status that was predictable, dependable, and insulated from electoral politics.” Nat'l TPS All., 150 3 F.4th at 1008–1010. Congress sought to replace “the Executive’s prior ad hoc framework for 4 providing relief to nationals of certain designated countries,” which lacked transparency and clear 5 criteria and was susceptible to ““the vagaries of our domestic politics.”” Id. (quoting 135 Congr.
 6 Rec. H7501 (daily ed. Oct. 25, 1989)). The TPS statute created a framework whereby the DHS 7 Secretary may designate a foreign state for TPS when nationals of that state cannot return there 8 safely. Id. at 110. Since the creation of the statute, DHS has “a longstanding practice of 9 considering all country conditions when undertaking the mandatory periodic review under the 10 statute, regardless of their relation to the originating condition.” Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d at 350. In 11 fact, “[i]ntervening factors arising after a country’s original TPS designation … were considered 12 relevant to determining whether a country continued to meet the conditions for continuing TPS 13 designation.” Ramos, 336 F. Supp. 3d at 1093.

14 Interpretation of 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) to mean the broader TPS designation is also 15 consistent with the humanitarian purpose of the TPS Statute. Congress committed its mission of 16 humanitarian relief by creating TPS. Since the mid-twentieth century, “every Administration 17 since and including that of President Eisenhower has permitted one or more groups of otherwise 18 deportable [foreign nationals] to remain temporarily in the United States out of concern that . . .
 19 forced repatriation . . . could endanger their lives or safety.” H.R. Rep. No. 100-627, at 6 (1988).
 20 Over the past three decades, this nation’s leaders have chosen to pick up the mantle and protect 21 those in need of aid.²

22
 23 ² The TPS program is described in the Humanitarian page of USCIS’s website: “The Secretary of 24 Homeland Security may designate a foreign country for TPS due to conditions in the country that 25 temporarily prevent the country’s nationals from returning safely, or in certain circumstances, 26 where the country is unable to handle the return of its nationals adequately.” U.S. Citizenship and 27 Immigration Services, Temporary Protected Status, <https://www.uscis.gov/humanitarian/temporary-protected-status>.
 28 Scholars and courts across the country have noted the humanitarian purpose of the TPS program.
See Andrew I. Schoenholtz, The Promise and Challenge of Humanitarian Protection in the United States: Making Temporary Protected Status Work as a Safe Haven, 15 Nw. J. L. & Soc. Pol’y. 1, 5 (2019) (noting the “the purpose of TPS to provide temporary safety to those whose countries are in crisis”); Sanchez v. Mayorkas, 593 U.S. 409, 412 (2021) (noting that the TPS program “provides humanitarian relief to foreign nationals in the United States who come from specified

1 Defendants' interpretation of 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(3)(A) to only include the initial 2 designation would grant the Secretary unfettered discretion to terminate TPS for a country in the 3 midst of destabilizing and destructive civil war so long as an historic flood for which an 4 antecedent TPS designation was made (even just months earlier) had dissipated. The import of the 5 TPS statute—that is, providing humanitarian relief to nonimmigrants whose country cannot 6 adequately handle their return—would be entirely flouted if TPS holders are forced to return to a 7 country with no functioning government, no running water, dismantled infrastructure, and the like, 8 simply because flood water had dissipated. Such a perplexing result is a natural consequence of 9 Defendants' interpretation of the TPS statute; and this Court need not "read the statute to usher in 10 such a bizarre and half-baked scheme." Kennedy v. Braidwood Mgmt., Inc., 606 U.S. 748, 787
11 (2025); Lawson v. FMR LLC, 571 U.S. 429, 471, (2014) (Sotomayor, J., dissenting) 12 ("[I]nterpretations of a statute which would produce absurd results are to be avoided if alternative 13 interpretations consistent with the legislative purpose are available.") (citing Griffin v. Oceanic 14 Contractors, Inc., 458 U.S. 564, 575, (1982); United States v. Lazarenko, 624 F.3d 1247, 1251 15 (9th Cir. 2010) ("In other words, because a literal application of the plain text leads to absurd 16 results, the plain text does not control.") The Court agrees with Plaintiffs that "[n]othing in the 17 statutory text ties the second criteria, regarding the country's ability to handle the return of its 18 nationals, to the disaster that triggered its initial designation." ECF 144 at 21. In exercising its 19 independent judgment, finds that Defendants' interpretation of the periodic review provision is 20 incongruent with the statute.

21 Notably, evidence produced in discovery reveals that Defendants explicitly decided to 22 narrow their consideration to factors which gave rise to the initial TPS designation. Internal 23

24 countries"); Ramos v. Nielsen, 321 F. Supp. 3d 1083, 1091 (N.D. Cal. 2018) ("TPS is . . . a 25 humanitarian program."); Nat'l TPS All. v. Noem, 150 F.4th 1000, 1009 (9th Cir. 2025) (describing 26 congressional debates in the late 1980s regarding "alternative mechanisms for granting 27 humanitarian relief to groups of non-U.S. citizens" which gave rise to the TPS program); 28 Solorzano v. Mayorkas, 987 F.3d 392, 394 (5th Cir. 2021) ("Congress created Temporary Protected Status in 1990 as a form of humanitarian relief."); Guerrero v. Johnson, 138 F. Supp. 3d 754, 758 (E.D. La. 2015) ("Congress enacted the [TPS] statute with the humanitarian aim of providing relief...").

1 emails show that DHS staff were directed to “[f]ocus on conditions described in the original 2 designation, and how they are/aren’t the same now” and directed to exclude consideration of 3 environmental concerns and corruption. ECF 176-2. In requesting country conditions reports, 4 DHS personnel requested revised reports that “only include[d] around 1 page of country 5 conditions” and “[i]nclude[d] any improvements” without “mention[ing] environmental concerns 6 or climate change.” ECF 176-2. Researchers had their team “revise the reports for Nepal, 7 Honduras, Nicaragua, and Haiti to make them consistent with [these] new guidelines.” Id.
8 Defendants counter by pointing to the large amount of information the Secretary received when 9 making her decision. ECF 166 at 9. However, “the fact that [the Secretary] received information 10 regarding [country] conditions, does not prove she ultimately considered and relied on those 11 conditions in deciding to terminate TPS status.” Ramos, 336 F. Supp. 3d at 1097. The notices 12 excluded any mention of “violence and crime in Honduras, weather events in Nicaragua,” “the 13 effects of the COVID-19 pandemic,” “inflation in Nepal,” a “murderous, dictatorial regime” in 14 Nicaragua, the State Department Travel Advisory warnings for Honduras and Nicaragua, or the 15 effect of the Russian invasion of Ukraine on Nepal’s agricultural capacity, despite the record 16 containing evidence of this information. ECF 175 at 12; ECF 176-11; ECF 176-8; ECF 145-9; 17 ECF 149-10; see 90 Fed. Reg. 30086; 90 Fed. Reg. 30089; 90 Fed. Reg. 24151.

18 Taken together, the Court finds that the Secretary improperly narrowed the scope of her 19 review of the conditions of the countries at issue in this litigation before making her termination 20 decision. The Secretary’s narrowing was based on an erroneous reading of the TPS statute and 21 history of DHS practice. Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs are entitled to judgment as a 22 matter of law on their claim that the Secretary’s termination decision was arbitrary and capricious 23 under the APA.

24 * * *

25 The Court finds that there are no genuine disputes of material fact with respect to 26 Plaintiffs’ first two claims under the APA and that, based on the record before the Court, Plaintiffs 27 are entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The Court, therefore, grants Plaintiffs’ motion for 28 partial summary judgment on both APA claims.

3. The Secretary's Terminations of TPS for Honduras, Nicaragua, and Nepal Inexplicably Departed from Prior Practice in Limiting the Orderly Transition Period.

Defendants argue that Plaintiffs fail to show that the Secretary’s decision not to extend the orderly transition period beyond the statutory default of 60 days was arbitrary and capricious. ECF 142 at 18. Plaintiffs argue that the Secretary’s decision to grant a 60-day transition period for Nepali, Honduran, and Nicaraguan TPS holders represented an unexplained departure from a decades-old agency practice in violation of the APA. ECF 167 at 19.

Analysis of this claim again raises the change-in-position doctrine whereby an agency’s “consistent practice, whether adopted expressly in a holding or established impliedly through repetition, sets the baseline from which future departures must be explained.” Wages & White Lions Invs., L.L.C., 604 U.S. at 570; see also Organized Vill. of Kake v. USDA, 795 F.3d 956, 966 (9th Cir. 2015) (when an agency breaks with a long-standing past practice, it must “display[] ‘awareness that it is changing position’” and provide “good reasons” for the new policy) (quoting FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 US 502, 515–16 (2009)).

As discussed above, Plaintiffs point to twenty-two years of DHS’s practice of setting an orderly transition period of six to eighteen months after the issuance of a TPS termination notice. ECF 28. Defendants draw the Court’s attention to two termination decisions in the thirty-five-year history of the TPS statute which has incorporated a 60-day transition period. See Termination of Designation of Lebanon Under Temporary Protected Status Program, 58 Fed. Reg. 7582 (Feb. 8, 1993) (60 days); Termination of Designation of Angola Under the Temporary Protected Status Program, 68 Fed. Reg. 3896-01, 3896 (Jan. 27, 2003) (60 days). However, given that the prevailing practice of prior administrations was to provide at least 6 months after the TPS termination date for holder to transition, the notices were required to—but failed to—acknowledge or explain the departure from the decades-long practice of providing at least a 6-month transition period under the APA. See Encino Motorcars, 579 U.S. at 222 (“It follows that an ‘[u]nexplained inconsistency’ in agency policy is ‘a reason for holding an interpretation to be an arbitrary and capricious change from agency practice.’”).

Accordingly, the Court denies Defendants' motion for summary judgment on Plaintiffs'

1 claim that the Secretary violated the APA by departing from prior agency practice without 2 explanation.

3 4. Genuine Issues of Material Fact Preclude Summary Judgment for Defendants on Plaintiffs' Equal Protection Claim

4 Defendants argue that they are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiffs' constitutional 5 claims because the Court cannot look beyond the facially legitimate reasons for the Secretary's 6 decision about immigration policy to find racial animus. ECF 142 at 18. Plaintiffs argue that a 7 genuine dispute as to whether the evidence shows that the challenged TPS decisions were 8 motivated by racial animus which warrants denial of Defendants' motion for summary judgment.
9 ECF 167 at 20.

10 Under the applicable analytical framework set forth in Arlington Heights, the Court finds 11 that there is a genuine dispute of material fact as to whether the decisions to vacate and terminate 12 were based on racial, ethnic, and/or national origin animus. Such animus can reasonably be shown 13 from the statements made by Secretary Noem and/or President Trump alone. Here, Plaintiffs 14 present a series of statements made by Defendants and officials in the current administration to 15 support the Due Process claim as to all plaintiffs.

16 In a January 29, 2025, post on X, Secretary Noem announced that she would end a Biden
17 order that allowed Venezuelans to stay in the country and "violate our laws." ECF 18-16. In a
18 March 20, 2025, post on X, Secretary Noem associated "migration management" with "sav[ing] 19 American lives and get[ting] criminals off our streets!" ECF 18-17. In a May 19, 2025, post on 20 X, DHS equated TPS holders with "MS-13 gang members," "known terrorists," and "murderers." 21 ECF 18-18. These statements are consistent with similar statements by President Trump including 22 one occurrence in which he stated that migrants were "poisoning the blood of our country." ECF 23 18-20; see also ECF 18-23 (President Trump asking why people "could not come from nice 24 countries . . . like Denmark, Switzerland, and Norway"); see Compl. ¶ 98 (President Trump "How 25 about allowing people to come to an open border . . . many of them murdered far more than one 26 person, and they're now happily living in the United States. You know now a murderer, I believe 27 this, it's in their genes. And we got a lot of bad genes in our country right now."); see also ECF 28 18-15 at 7 (Secretary Noem describing immigration as an "invasion happening on purpose . . . to 1 remake the foundation of this country”).

2 For each termination decision, Secretary Noem invoked President Trump’s Invasion
3 Executive Order (E.O.) See 90 Fed. Reg. 24,151, 24,152 n.10 (June 6, 2025) (Nepal termination
4 notice, citing E.O. 14159, § 16(b)); 90 Fed. Reg. 30,086, 30,088 n.4 (July 8, 2025) (Nicaragua
5 termination notice, citing same); 90 Fed. Reg. 30,089, 30,091 n.10 (July 8, 2025) (Honduras 6 termination notice, citing same). The Secretary described President Trump’s Invasion E.O. as 7 “directing” her to limit TPS designations, id., because, in President Trump’s view, TPS holders 8 (among others) were part of a “flood of illegal immigration” that “engaged in hostile activities” 9 and had “abused the generosity of the American people,” “committing vile and heinous acts 10 against innocent Americans.” 90 Fed. Reg. at 8443 § 1. The statements of the Secretary and other 11 officials in the administration which repeatedly characterize immigrants as invaders upsetting the 12 foundation of the country perpetuates the racist “replacement theory” which stands for the idea 13 that non-white immigrants will “replace” the white race and undermine the nation’s “white” 14 foundation. ECF 17-20 ¶ 18. The President and Secretary’s policies and policy goals—including 15 the decisions to terminate TPS—promote the debunked and racist “replacement theory.” Id.
16 Plaintiffs have presented substantial evidence that the Secretary’s termination decisions, which 17 rested on false and negative stereotypes entirely “divorced from any factual context,” Hawaii, 585 18 U.S. at 705–06 (citation omitted), manifested discriminatory intent.

19 A fact is “material” if it “might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law,” 20 and a dispute as to a material fact is “genuine” if there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable trier 21 of fact to decide in favor of the nonmoving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 22 248 (1986). Based on the record before the Court, there is a genuine dispute of material fact about 23 whether the Secretary’s decision was procedurally proper or influenced by racial animus. Lui v.
24 DeJoy, 129 F.4th 770, 780 (9th Cir. 2025) (finding a “genuine dispute of material fact” as to the 25 plaintiff’s claim under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act where plaintiff provided sufficient 26 evidence to support her claim that the defendant’s conduct was “motivated by racial animus” and 27 reversing the district court’s summary judgment holding).

28 Accordingly, based on the record before the Court, Defendants are not entitled to summary

1 judgment, and the Court denies Defendants' motion.

2 VI. CONCLUSION

3 "The President is not above the law." Trump v. United States, 603 U.S. 593, 642 (2024).

4 Neither are his cabinet officials. The rule of law demands that when executive officials exceed 5 their authority, they must be held to account. The Administrative Procedures Act ensures 6 government accountability by making agencies transparent, require public participation, setting 7 fair rulemaking standards, and allowing courts to review actions for legality and rationality.

8 Our laws should not favor the loud and powerful simply because of their positions. Yet, 9 for too long, our laws have overlooked the quiet truths—truths carried in the margins, truths lived 10 but never spoken aloud. It is the duty of every public servant entrusted with shaping a more just 11 society to bring those truths into the open, to translate lived experience into written protection. It 12 means hearing the faintest whisper of injustice and refusing to let it fade. It means honoring the 13 people who call this country home but have never been invited to speak in it. It means finally 14 ensuring that the law speaks for them.

15 Having considered the parties' briefs, the relevant legal authority, and for the reasons 16 below, the Court DENIES Defendants' motion to dismiss; GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN 17 PART Defendants' motion to exclude expert testimony; GRANTS Plaintiffs' motion for partial 18 summary judgment; DENIES Defendants' motion for summary judgment.

19 Specifically, the Court declares that the termination of TPS for Nepal on June 6, 2025, and 20 Honduras and Nicaragua on July 7, 2025, were unlawful under the APA. Moreover, the Court 21 vacates the Secretary's termination decisions with respect to Honduras, Nepal, and Nicaragua.
22 Corner Post, Inc. v. Bd. of Governors of Fed. Reserve Sys., 603 U.S. 799, 830–31 (2024)
23 (Kavanaugh, J., concurring) ("When a federal court concludes that an agency adjudicative order 24 [or any other agency action] is unlawful, the court must vacate that order.").

25 The Court directs entry of a final judgment under Rule 54(b) on the APA claims for which 26 the Court has granted summary judgment in favor of Plaintiffs. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) ("When 27 an action presents more than one claim for relief . . . , the court may direct entry of a final 28 judgment as to one or more, but fewer than all, claims or parties only if the court expressly

1 determines that there is no just reason for delay.”). The Clerk of the Court is directed to enter a 2 final judgment in favor of Plaintiffs on the APA claims raised in Plaintiffs’ motion for partial 3 summary judgment related to (1) the termination of TPS for Honduras (2) the termination of TPS 4 for Nepal, and (3) the termination of TPS for Nicaragua.

5 As for the remaining claims – (4) the APA claim related to the orderly transition period for 6 Honduras, (5) the APA claim related to the orderly transition period for Nepal, (6) the APA claim 7 related to the orderly transition period for Nicaragua, (7) the Equal Protection claim related to the 8 Honduras TPS decisions, (8) the Equal Protection claim related to the Nepal TPS decisions and (9) 9 the Equal Protection claim related to the Nicaragua TPS decisions – the Court temporarily stays 10 continued litigation.

11 A temporary stay will help conserve judicial and litigant resources. Further, a stay will 12 allow the appellate courts to adjudicate most of the statutory claims before the constitutional ones.
13 Cf. Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 692 (1979) (stating that “[a] court presented with both 14 statutory and constitutional grounds to support the relief requested usually should pass on the 15 statutory claim before considering the constitutional question”).

16 This Order resolves ECF 110, 142, 143, 144, and 153.

17 IT IS SO ORDERED.

18 Dated: December 31, 2025

19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26 27 28

TRINA L. THOMPSON
United States District Judge